Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers 10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our down by adding feathers to it.

KNOW THE FACTS BEFORE YOU BUY IT

FACT: Fill power, this is the amount the cubic inches filled by one ounce of down. Higher fill power means a higher quality down. You will find that as the quality of the down increases, so does the comfort & life of the item.

FACT: We use only high thread count, baffle box construction, 100% cotton covers on our down comforters & pillows. Down insulates by trapping air and holding in your body temperature, keeping you comfortable through the night. Low quality comforters are usually heavier because it takes more of an inferior down to fill a comforter. Inferior down becomes clumpy and it can't breath, resulting in your becoming over heated and uncomfortable. Our high quality down gives you the warmth and comfort without the weight.

FACT: In all likelihood you will have your comforter longer than the car you are now driving.

THE NEW HAMPTONS INFORMATION MINISTER.....

Spring Has Sprung

Thank Goodness The Quiet Winter On The East End Is Over

By Dan Rattiner

"So!" the man said, grinning at me. "Glad to see the end of the winter? Pretty quiet out there, huh? Lookin' forward to all the action of a busy summer?"

It's true the dogs curl up on the white line in the middle of Montauk Highway all winter. And the cops sit in wicker rocking chairs reading the paper. There have been a couple of exceptions, but for the most part it's been quiet, as usual.

There was a man got shot dead in Water Mill the night of April 26. A second man was wounded. It happened on Edge of Woods Road at the home of Alan Kuchtuk who is wheelchair bound because of a stroke. Lots of people were there, but after it happened everybody fled but the dead guy, James Garcia, and Kuchtuk. The police think it had something to do with drugs. As of this writing, the police have arrested a Providence Rhode Island man in connection with the crime.

Three weeks ago, a grand jury charged a woman, who killed a man with her car on a Saturday night in November, with a 17-count indictment. She's a real estate broker who lives in Bridgehampton. She'd met a guy in a bar, had a few drinks, liked the idea of him driving behind her car and following her to her house for some late night whatever. They got halfway, she swerved off the road in Sagaponack and hit and killed a man walking on the shoulder on ter and leaving the scene of an accident.

Christopher Rocancourt is back on Long Island. He's the swindler who was out here two years ago bilking people out of their cash by claiming he was a Rockefeller. He told people that if they gave him cash, he could double or triple what they gave him. He has written a book about it. It's called Moi, Christopher Rocancourt, Orphelin, Play-Boy et Toulard (which means Orphan, Playboy and Prisoner. Rocancourt is French). He still says he didn't do anything wrong, but all these people in the Hamptons did, giving him their money like that. What were they thinking? He could get them something for nothing? He's being arraigned.

Last weekend in March, just after the last snowstorm, there was a big drug bust in a parking lot on County Road 39 in Southampton. All these guys with revolvers and ski masks, dressed like Ninjas, jumping out from cars to arrest two drug couriers coming out of a store. Everybody in the lot ducked for cover. One of the men had a big stash of cocaine in his underwear. Tried to waddle away but failed.

Lizzie served her time, changed her life and her attitude, and has a couple of new clients... I don't know if she wrote a book, yet.

his way home after getting a six-pack at the all-night Hess Station in Wainscott. She stopped. The man stopped behind her. Then she started up her car, which was pretty bashed in, and drove off. Never said anything to anybody about it for the rest of the weekend. On Monday, she took her car into Suburban Auto Body in Southampton and asked them to do all this bodywork. Said she hit a deer. They turned her in to the police. She's charged with manslaughter

The murder of millionaire Ted Ammon, bludgeoned to death in his bed on a Saturday night in East Hampton, remains unsolved. He'd been going through a divorce with his wife, Generosa. Wife's lover, a local electrician named Pelosi, installed the burglar alarm system in the Ammon house. It was turned off the night of the murder. Electrician is a chief suspect but no charges have been filed.

After the murder, Generosa inherited the fortune, and in her grieving widowhood, married the electrician. They moved to the Ammon estate in England for awhile, other Ammon properties being sold off. Now they are back and Pelosi is serving a four-month prison term for violating parole on DWI charges. He also got new DWI charges. Generosa, meanwhile, has become terminally ill. She appeared in court on a snowy, blustery day in February to arrange for a "standby guardian" to be appointed for her two children if she were to die before her husband gets out of jail. She looked very thin. In the end, Pelosi inherits everything, about $40 million.

A prominent philanthropist with an ocean-front house in Bridgehampton was arrested last week in New York on charges of running a lucrative Internet porno site. Dupes would go to the site, and with the promise of free sex access, enter their credit card numbers in the belief that this was proof of being "over 18" only and the card would not be billed. Wrong. Not only did you get billed, but your identity information was turned over to the Gambino crime family in Queens. The philanthropist, Norman Chanes, is a big donor to important charities in the Hamptons. Police, who say the site has brought in about $230 million, have been investigating this case for months.

You may remember that several years ago two brothers named Wilzig from New Jersey built a castle in the woods in Water Mill. One of them, the law abiding, steady-girlfriend-good-boy Wilzig this March sold his share of the castle to the bad-boy, party-going, bring-on-the-girls brother Wilzig for $1.7 million. The good Wilzig, I am told, is back in New Jersey, minding the family bank.

Lizzie Grubman, who angrily backed her daddy's Mercedes Benz SUV into a crowd of people waiting by the velvet rope outside the Conscience Point Inn nightclub two summers ago, returned to the Hamptons this March. She's served her time, changed her life and her attitude, and has a couple of new clients for her public relations firm. I don't know if she wrote a book, yet.

Some guys held up a dry cleaner in Southampton during that last snowfall in April. To paraphrase Jesse James, that's not where the money is. But they did it anyway.

As I said, other than these few things, it's been a quiet winter out here on the East End.

Ira's Sand Dune

Two Bureaucracies Say He Built It Right, One Say He Built It Wrong

By Dan Rattiner

A man stumbles upon the pitiful wreckage of some stone buildings in a field. There is a ruined statue, with this inscription on the base. "My name is Ozymandias, King of Kings, look on my works, ye mighty and despair!" Thus wrote Percy Bysshe Shelley in perhaps the most celebrated poem he ever composed.

Many people, traveling through Sagaponack, think of the poem Ozymandias, when they pass all the farms and farmhouses, all the quaint cedar shingle summer homes there, and come upon this enormous stone pile that has been under construction down on the beach. It has been under construction for five years. Owned by a wealthy industrialist named Ira Rennert, it is destined, when finished someday, to become the single largest private residence in the United States. It will exceed 110,000 square feet. It will cost a staggering sum, estimated in the area of $100 million. And it will make every house in the Hamptons, not to mention the Hearst Castle in California, look like a sharecropper's shack.

It is, however, oceanfront. And the reason it makes people think of the poem Ozymandias goes. It's on old maps. Peter saw it, apparently. This writer saw it in 1985 when it blocked the road and the immediate surrounding area for an entire year. All this property was a potato farm then. Geographically, we're talking about a very low point here, with the ocean just over the dunes.

There's a lot you can do with drainage. But with the entire Atlantic Ocean to keep out, one wonders. We have global warming and rising oceans because we are pumping noxious gasses into the atmosphere. (Some very likely from Ira Rennert's industrial plants.) By the year 2099, sea level is expected to rise between two and fifteen feet depending on who you talk to.

My name is Ira Rennert, King of Kings... You might have to use scuba gear to see his mansion someday. But that's not our problem. And it's not Ira Rennert's, either. He's looking at the more immediate problem of keeping the is because the property borders not only the ocean but also the entire length of a dead end street called Peter's Pond Lane. They don't call it that for nothing. Though you won't find a pond on Peter's Pond Lane today, one does appear there from time to time. It comes and water out. And so he applied for a "sand replenishment permit" to build up the sand dune in front of his house. And that's where his troubles began.

They say the rich put their pants on one leg at a time just like the rest of us. Well, Ira Rennert had to face the same bureaucracy as the rest of us when he applied for a permit to protect all his marble and gold, of which there is very much, some of which is already in place.

Three permits are needed. One from the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation, one from the Southampton Town Planning and Development Board (a subdivision of which is the Town Coastal Erosion Hazard Administration), and one from the Southampton Trustees.

The State and the Town I think you are all familiar with. The Trustees, which are a governmental authority created by King James II through the Dongan Patent in 1686, still are in charge of public lands near (and even under) all bodies of water in the town. Their jurisdiction extends, on the ocean side, up to the top of the existing sand dunes, although there is some legal question about that, since sand dunes shift and move.

Anyway, Ira Rennert got permits from all three governmental bodies. He had to indicate how much sand he would bring in (4,500 cubic yards, which is 1000 feet long by 15 feet wide by 8 feet high), he had to agree that the resulting dune would be at least as high as the existing dune, or the one that was there on the topography map when he originally got his building permit in 1997. In other words, he would restore his dune. He also, for the Trustees, had to indicate WHERE exactly he would put the sand. Traditionally, new sand is put in front of the old sand on the ocean side. This doubles the size of the protective dune, if the existing dune is still there.

Well, Ira Rennert thinks big. He signs a check. An army of men move in. Two days later the work is done. That's what would happen here.

Keep in mind that here is a man who bought 63 acres of land with 1,000 feet of oceanfront, convinced a building inspector that a 29-bedroom house with 40 bathrooms and parking for 126 cars was a private residence, and has had teams of workmen on the site every day. One of the first things he had them do, since there is no law against it, was to strip off all the rich local topsoil and have it carted away. (Bridgehampton Loam, in farm competitions, has won all sorts of agricultural awards for its richness.) He then brought in his own topsoil, and, though I am not so sure of this, on top of that puts lots of sod.

So here is what happened on those two days about the sand dunes. Bobcat machines, that move around sand, appeared on top of the existing dunes, a fact which alarmed neighbors who called the authorities. Representatives from the three governmental bodies went down there, but by the time they did, they were too late. The existing dunes were run over and their tops plowed up. The new sand, brought in by a great caravan of trucks, was then driven out onto this temporary road, placed on the top of the former old dunes, and dropped into place. The new dunes were at least as tall, if not taller, than the old. And then an army of workmen appeared with beach grass and began planting the entire length.

The State DEC declared the work to be in accordance with their permit. The Town said it looked to them like the work was in accordance with their permit, then sent surveyors down there the next day who confirmed that it was. But Scott Strough, the President of the Town Trustees, went ballistic.

TR And The Roughriders

Montauk's Spanish-American War History And Its Lessons For Today

By Dan Rattiner

If you drive around Montauk a bit, you cannot fail to see references to Teddy Roosevelt, this country's charismatic 26th President. There's Roughrider Landing down by the railroad station. There is Theodore Roosevelt County Park on the road going to the Lighthouse. In anniversary years of the occasion when Colonel Roosevelt and his Roughriders landed here by boat in the fall of 1898, the town holds reenactments out at Indian Field Ranch. The picture above shows myself as Admiral Dewey and musician Percy Heath as a reporter for the Montauk Clarion newspaper. It is 1898 and the victorious troops of the American army have come home from Cuba, having defeated Spain in the Spanish-American War.

Some people say, regarding the recent altercation in Iraq, that this is the first time ever that our nation invaded a country without the war being started first by that country. They have forgotten about the Spanish-American War. As Teddy Roosevelt said, just four years after it concluded and he was flexing America's muscles abroad as the President of the United States, "Talk softly and carry a big stick."

The history of that war, the short version, is astonishingly similar to what we have today.

There was a brutal Spanish government in Cuba, headed by a general known as "Butcher" Wyler. They were torturing and murdering the people of that land. The President of the United States at that time, William McKinley concerned. His advisors urged him to intervene. So McKinley sent one of the best ships in the American Navy into the harbor of this land, with emissaries to negotiate with General Wyler to get him to resign. Nothing came of it. So he declared war, sent a small army across the sea to attack the troops of the general, defeated them in several battles, and, in a remarkably short time — ten weeks — succeeded in taking the capital city.

The general went into exile and a new leader, elected by the people of that country, came into power. And that situation remained stable and prosperous for more than sixty years — until Castro came in on behalf of the poor, rural country farmers, the campaneros, and declared that land to be a Communist state.

Montauk's involvement, by the way, was to act as the arrival point for all the victorious American soldiers returning on troop ships from that far away land. Teddy Roosevelt and his Rough Riders, on horseback, had charged up San Juan Hill to rout the enemy during that campaign and had become American heroes. Within two years, Roosevelt, who was 39 when he was photographed charging around Montauk on horseback, would assume the Presidency of the United States. He arrived

— this was the President just prior to Roosevelt — worried that such a thing could be going on where our national interests were aboard a troop ship gliding into Fort Pond Bay in Montauk leaning on the railing and shouting to the crowd of photographers and reporters on the shore there to meet him.

"We have had a bully time," he said, "and I am feeling fit, but we've had quite a fight."

The troops arrived in Montauk, 29,000 of them, in late August, 1898, set up several thousand army tents, and stayed for thirty days. They were national heroes for having freed a nation from oppression, but many soldiers were suffering from tropical diseases — Roosevelt was not one of them — and President McKinley thought it would be best for them to make camp in the fresh air of Montauk and wait 30 days before going home, which they did. Officially, the Army was in

Montauk on "maneuvers."

In some ways, George W. Bush is merely following in the footsteps of that war in 1898. But there are differences. At that time, we were taking our first shaky steps onto the world stage. For the next ninety years, we were one of several major players on that stage. But then, since 1991 and the collapse of the Soviet Union, we have stood alone, quite often having to act unilaterally. We removed a dictator from Panama. After five years of waiting for the Europeans to act in their own backyard to clean up a mess in the former Yugoslavia, we got tired of their dithering and went in and bombed Belgrade until the man who was causing all the trouble, the dictator Slobodan Milosevic, flew the white flag. Last year, after five years of horrendous dictatorship in Afghanistan and attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon, we went in, removed the government there and replaced it with a more benevolent regime. Now we are straightening out the remains of a brutal dictatorship in Iraq. Bush's policy, especially since 9/11, has been to fix what he finds wrong and dangerous in the world. It is hard to argue with the consistency of this policy, and considering we are the only nation in the world strong enough to do this, it is hard to argue that we should not have taken this policy on. In every case, if you think about it, the reins of government have been handed over to the people (we are in the process of that in Iraq). And the citizenry is freer than it was before.

Prior to America's declaration of war against Spain, the Cuban people were being brutalized by the Spanish, who ruled the place with an iron hand. The Spanish were never kind to either the natives in the lands they colonized, or to the descendants of the Spanish colonists they sent to take over. In Cuba, the Spanish early on simply killed all the natives. As for their colonists, unlike further north where English colonists had won their independence in 1776, the Spanish simply put down all attempts by the Cuban colonists to rebel. Three rebellions were put down between 1859 and 1890, but then there was a fourth, the biggest one, and the Spanish were having trouble with it and were rounding Cuban farmers up and putting them into concentration camps. There, in the mountains, they were left in desperate conditions.

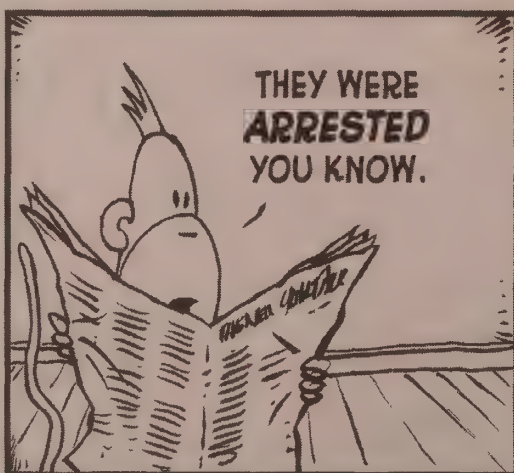

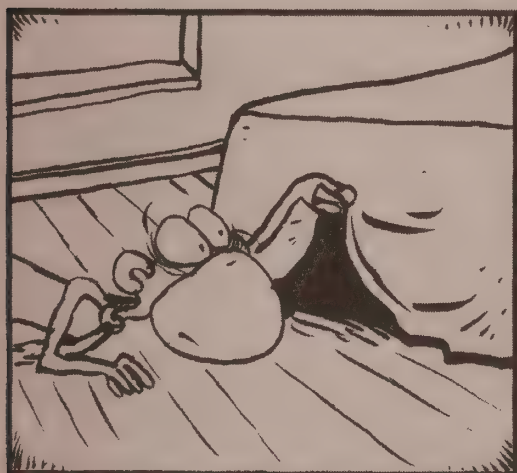

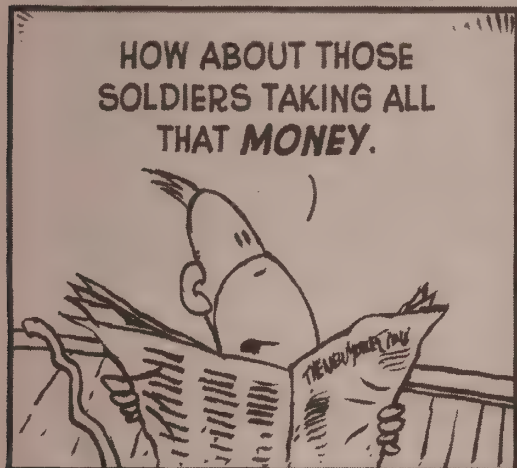

In 1897, President William McKinley's advisors recommended we join the rebels and declare war on Spain. The President deferred. He did not feel the American Army was strong enough. He proceeded with diplomacy while William Randolph Hearst, who owned a chain of newspapers around the country, published

Spring Cleaning

What Does A Reporter Get Rid Of To Get Ready For Summer?

By Dan Rattiner

It's springtime, and everywhere people are spring cleaning. For journalists who spend their time writing stories or sniffing around trying to find them, there are these filing cabinets that are overflowing with bizarre articles and odd stories that they find during the year and just don't know what to do with. All are short. All are absolutely true. And all are absolutely hilarious. But none seem to fit into anything anywhere.

So here's my collection for the springtime of 2003. I publish them here. Having done that, I can now clean these articles and notes out of my filing cabinets and, well, pack them away into another filing cabinet up in the attic where I will never see them again. Although I will know they are up there.

In Kansas City, 18-year-old Joe Thompson III lost control of his Jeep around 9 o'clock at night, clipped a car that had stopped in front of him and rolled his Jeep over five times. During one of those times, the fiberglass top got ripped off. Apparently, Thompson, who was not wearing a seat belt, was at some point sent flying thirty feet into the air, where he bounced into three power lines ripping two of them off their poles. One wrapped itself around his leg, and, as he bounced around up there, shot him over toward the last intact wire which he reached for and grabbed barehanded. There he hung, 25 feet up.

The man that Thompson clipped had stopped his car to watch fascinated as the Jeep rolled over and over. When it stopped, he ran over. Where was the driver?

"Dude," Thompson shouted, "I'm up here."

And so the police arrived and the fire department arrived and the ambulance arrived and twenty minutes later, using ladders, they got him

You may have seen it. It was a TV commercial this past January for Metamucil, the powder you put in water and drink to get yourself regular.

In the commercial, the "Old Faithful" water geyser in Yellowstone National Park is shown with a guide explaining it goes off every 76 minutes. The next scene is at night. The park is closed. And a National Park ranger sneaks over with a glass of Metamucil and pours it into the geyser. Then he runs off.

Good commercial eh? Not to the Park Service.

They sent a searing letter to Proctor & Gamble, the makers of Metamucil, noting that the geysers can be damaged by people dumping things into them. The park service also pointed out that coming close to the geyser, which is not permitted, could be really dangerous. They wanted the commercial pulled off the air. Instead, P & G, offered a compromise, which was accepted by the Park Service. And so this great commercial continues to be shown, but now with the words YOU ARE WATCHING A DRAMATIZATION at the bottom.

Do not try this at home.

down.

Thompson's father was just happy to see him safe and sound. "The police had called and told us he was down here hanging on for dear life," he said. "I didn't know they meant he was literally hanging on for dear life."

A man who will remain nameless broke an index finger while trying to remove a woman's bra in London this winter. He was taken to St. George's Hospital where Dr. Andrew Fleming attended him.

"It was a very nasty injury to the second knuckle down the finger," the doctor told reporters.

As a result of this, a bra removal study took place and the results published in last August's issue of the British Journal of Plastic Surgeons. The study involved one hundred unmarried men in their 30s and 40s who agreed to answer some survey questions involving private romantic situations. Here are the results.

40% of the men said they experienced difficulty in removing a woman's bra. The average time cited by the 100 men to remove a bra was 27 seconds, when the remover was able to do the deed with both hands. When right-handed men were asked how long it would take them to remove a bra using only their left hand, the average of the answers was 58 seconds.

One man said he spent an average of 20 minutes trying to remove a woman's bra.

A woman had a hysterectomy and afterwards sued her doctor for branding the initials UK on her uterus before removing it. Her name is Stephanie Means and she had ordered a videotape made of the surgery, and upon seeing this, had become distraught and humiliated. She wants to be compensated for her pain and suffering.

Her surgeon, Dr. Michael Guiler appeared on ABC's "Good Morning America" to defend himself. He said "it is very important during surgery to be able to identify left from right on a uterus you are about to remove, so you have to make a mark, and it has to be asymmetrical, repetitive and identifiable to the surgeon. This is standard procedure and it is explained to the patient ahead of time. UK stands for the University of Kentucky which gave me my training, my medical school training, my residency training, and I'm very proud of that and I certainly did not mean that to be demeaning in any way."

The branding is done with a cauterizing instrument.

Women in Germany who have themselves injected with Botox to make themselves look prettier are reporting that Botox had a very unusual side effect. Their armpits became less smelly.

Could this be true? Dr. Marc Heckmann at the Ludwig-Maximilian University in Munich decided to find out. Sixteen people were given shots of Botox in one armpit but not the other. Then, these people wore identical T-shirts and waited a day without bathing. After that, they reported back to Dr. Heckmann's office where the T-shirts were removed and given to lab assistants who used pairs of scissors to cut out the armpits.

Scientists then sniffed these 32 T-shirt armpit cut outs and rated them from zero to six for smell intensity and minus 3 to plus 3 for "unpleasant" or "pleasant" quality of the odor. Results were published in the journal Archives of Dermatology and they showed yes indeed the T-shirt armpits that received Botox shots were indeed sweeter. They were also "drier," a side effect which seemed to explain the matter. Botox

A DOG, KNOWING HE'S NOT ALLOWED ON THE BEACH MEMORIAL DAY TO LABOR DAY, CHECKS TO SEE IF THE COAST IS CLEAR.

Deer Attack

Another Nice Spring Afternoon On The Beach In Sagaponack

By Dan Rattiner

Late last Monday afternoon, down at the beach in Sagaponack, this remarkable thing happened. I was sitting in a folding chair, typing an article on a laptop for this newspaper as I sometimes do, when off to the west, something moving caught my eye. It had also caught the eye of this little dog that goes with me just about wherever I go. He perked up, sniffing the air, looking out to see what he could see.

Where I was at this time was by the little sandbar that separates the southern shore of Sag Pond from the ocean. At certain times of the year, the pond spills over into the sea. The rest of the time, there is this little bar, maybe a hundred yards wide and two hundred yards long, keeping the water of the pond separated from the ocean. I was to the east of the bar, sitting facing west toward the sunset. As things were to develop, this was a ringside seat.

In front of me, across that bar, two hundred yards away, a herd of deer had begun walking quietly along the far shore of the pond toward the ocean. Where they had been before that I do not know. There is mostly dunes over there. They could have just come in from behind them.

They stopped for a moment as they got to the surf's edge. That is to say, the lead deer stopped. Behind, all the others stopped. Their heads were held high, their ears up and turned forward, some looking out to sea, but others looking off in other directions. They were exhibiting classic herd behavior. Looking out for predators.

All together there were six of them. I have a camera I take with me to the beach to record just such occasions but of course it was now in the car. Just getting up from my folding chair, I knew, would spook them. So I could forget that.

There at the water's edge, just two hundred yards from me, I was struck by how relaxed and sometimes he would pull back and at other times the entire herd would rearrange itself and move over toward the stray to cover him.

Mostly, though, having just walked down the shore to the beach, they were looking out at it. I've seen fishermen do this. Also surfers, tourists. This was a first. Hmmm. Think it's calm enough for a swim? See any fish?

What they really looked like they were doing was contemplating the meaning of it all.

Hmmm. We've come down here, now, just look at THAT. As far as the eye can see. Salt water. Long live salt water.

They stayed down at the water's edge for quite a long time, relatively speaking. Maybe five minutes. My dog and I watched them. Apparently they didn't see us. The sun began to lower behind them. Soon they would be in silhouette.

Now, however, one of the deer started to walk down the bar toward us. He took a few steps, the rest of the herd, one at a time, took a few steps. It seemed that was the way the herd was deciding to go. Maybe. Then somebody stepped the other way. Maybe not. The fact was they were moving more of the time toward us and less of the time away from us. A trend was developing. It occurred to me that there really was no purpose to wherever they were going. They just were drifting this way and that way. And wherever they went, when they got there, that's where they were. If the coast was clear, they'd stay awhile.

Well, the coast wasn't quite clear in this case. My little white dog was now at Defcon Two. He sat there motionless, all fifteen pounds of him, waiting to see what these six deer, who weighed collectively about half a ton, would do.

They kept coming. Dog crouched down, assuming attack position, as in — don't come inside the perimeter. They were approaching the perimeter. Alert. Alert. He stood up and barked. The deer froze. He growled softly.

At this point, they were no more than a hundred yards away, and if they were to follow the line of the pond, which I think they were going to do, they would get to about eighty yards of us, then curve around and head away from the beach and go north, escaping so to speak over the dunes along the near shore of the pond.

The dog charged. He does this all the time. I don't worry about it. He runs out about fifty feet from where I sit, then stops and barks madly, as if there is some dotted line in the sand out there that describes the boundary of our staked out property and he has reached it but can't cross it. This fifty foot distance from the chair goes out in every direction, so the boundary really is a circle around where I sit. Out of it he won't go. Come into it at your peril.

The deer looked at him. They really have no expressions on their faces but I think I did see just a hint of disgust there. This little thing, not much larger than a mouse. Behaving like that. Their eyes, with the big eye lashes, blinked. That's about all he got.

The dog now stood there, at the boundary, quivering, wagging his tail. The deer, having sized him up, now looked nonchalantly around as they had done before, heads high, ears up and turned, wondering if the commotion might attract something worth worrying about.

It didn't of course.

Nevertheless, the deer moved in, slowly, as I thought they would, and with great dignity, along the near shore of the pond, the reflection of the sun shimmering on its surface behind them, to go north, toward the dune at the back of the beach and escape. Soon they were over the dune and gone.

The dog licked his lips and trotted triumphantly back toward the chair. He sat down, facing out. He turned his head, briefly, and our eyes met.

You are ridiculous, I thought. Then I spoke to him.

"Thanks," I said.

Catch 22

Friends And Family Honor The Memory Of Joe Heller At Bookhampton

By Joseph H. Mintzer

"Actors, activists, authors, admirers," the invitation read. Thus did the Bookhampton bookstore invite one and all to honor what would have been the 80th birthday of the late Joe Heller. They would hold a marathon reading of Catch-22, his great, wildly funny chronicle of the absurdities of war. It would go on for 14 hours.

Organized by Charline Spektor and Jeremy Nussbaum of the East Hampton bookstore, and Valerie Heller, Joe Heller's widow, the ten-hour-long tribute began at noon last Saturday with a reading by actress Kathleen Turner.

In the hours that followed, they stepped up to the lectern — Budd Schulberg, Eli Wallach, Speed Vogel, Peter Mathiessen, Mark Green, Kaylie Jones, Dan Rattiner, Robert Towbin, James Brady, Ken Auletta, Rona Jaffe, Frederick Karl, Ellen Frank David Parker, Gabriel Nussbaum, Barbara Stone, Bob Tulp, Steven Grossman. There were others, too, who came just to listen, people who never knew or ever met Joe, and still others who knew only his writing but who came hoping to read aloud about the loonies who inhabited the pages of Catch-22. About Captain Yossarian who was "determined to stay alive if it was the last thing he did," and Colonel Cathcart and Doc Daneeka and Lieutenant Scheiskopf (translate that for yourself!) and Major de Coverley and ex-PFC Wintergreen, and Major Major and the cast of seemingly disconnected men, "adjusting" to the ludicrous nature of war by engaging in ludicrous acts of denial or of self-preservation, in mind as well as in body. How else to respond, as they either flew or serviced the B-52 bombers that took off day after day from the (fictitious) island of Pianosa in the Mediterranean to blast the cities and towns of southern France and Italy and the hapless people who lived there, and, occasionally, any enemy troops who may have been in the neighborhood.

(In World War II, as Heller's good buddy Kurt Vonnegut might want to remind us, what is now referred to as "collateral damage" was itself an objective, witness the London blitz, and the firebombing of Dresden, where more people died of asphyxiation as the oxygen was sucked out of the air to fuel the flames, than died from the fire itself.)

So what was Catch-22?

Simply put the phrase that has become part of mainstream language everywhere English is spoken, referred to two conflicting military rules: a pilot could request a leave due to in-

"I've already got a Purple Heart, I'll just take the aspirin."
Cartoon by Bill Maudlin, 1944

sanity, but if that pilot was mentally competent enough to request a leave due to insanity, he was deemed sufficiently rational and fit to fly. (* See the end of this story for the "catch" verbatim.)

Joe Heller

Punctuated by serious, overtly anti-war passages, the humor of twisted logic, or the logic of twisted minds, runs through page after page and chapter after chapter. Again and again the audience at Bookhampton reacted with laughter.

Kaylie Jones remarked that she remembers hearing her father James Jones roaring loudly while he was reading Catch-22. There were things like the reference to Hitler as "having done a great job for un-American activities in Germany," or the wordplay involving Major Major who decided to sign official military correspondence as either Washington Irving or Irving Washington, switching because it was shorter, to John Milton or alternatively Milton John; or the nonsense dialogue of the top brass about the interpretation of a message that bore a mention of T.S. Eliot, and assumed it was either some new code, or "color of the day," but in any case something that demanded official investigation; or Major de Coverley's private skeet shooting range, where everyone was invited to come so they "could learn to shoot skeet better." And Orr who wanted to have apple cheeks so he put crab apples in them. And about Nately's whore...and on and on.

Joe Heller was born in Brooklyn, a literary spawning ground that also gave us Norman Mailer and Irwin Shaw, writers who lifted the lid on the tragedy and travesty of war. Incidentally, Mailer's The Naked and the Dead also takes place on an imaginary island, this one in the Pacific. Mailer, however, made reality seem unreal, while Heller gave credibility to the incredible. As a military intelligence officer with an infantry division I saw Mailer's vision of war during the Battle of the Bulge, and I also saw what Heller saw — GIs as Milo Minderbinder-style entrepreneurs, swapping "liberated" wines with an Army quartermaster for extra blankets in exchange for a supply of fresh eggs from local civilians.

Joe's war began when he enlisted at nineteen. He flew with the 12th Air Force, completing sixty missions before going home. After the war he went on to get degrees in English and American Lit at NYU and Columbia, followed by a Fulbright at Oxford. He taught at Penn State, CCNY and at Oxford's St. Catherine. He did promotional work for Time, Look, McCall's, wrote screenplays ("Sex and the Single Girl") among others and wrote for television.

He began writing Catch-22 in 1953, eight years out of the Air Force, finishing it in 1961. A long-time resident of the Hamptons he told Sag Harbor bookseller Canio Pavone in an in-interview that appeared in Hampton Shorts first issue in 1996 that he did not construct the novel in the usual way by letting the reader in on much of "what's to come." Instead he started it with a "milieu of confusion" as Canio described it — to reflect the surreal, bizarre story in a kind of crazy Canterbury Tale of war. Because of that Heller said, the initial reviews were less than enthusiastic. It was Nelson Algren, he added, who latched on to the book giving it a push just as Vietnam, was becoming more quagmire than highway to a brave new world in southeast Asia, and the "idiot's delight," in Robert Sherwood's phrase, of destroying a country in order to save it made the book required reading in the peace movement of the sixties. Passionately praised by Bertrand Russell who invited Heller to England to meet him, it was called by Phillip Toynbee "one of the greatest works of satire in the English language." He might also have said that "Catch-22" is to the 20th and 21st centuries what Swift's Gulliver's Travels was to the eighteenth and nineteenth. It has sold millions of copies world-wide.

In the years that followed Catch-22 he wrote a drama, "We Bombed in New Haven," "Something Happened," "Good as Gold," "God Knows," "No Laughing Matter," an autobiography, "Picture This," "Closing Time," "Now and Then," and "Portrait of the Artist as an Old Man," his last novel. His best work, however, and certainly his best-known is Catch-22. And those who heard it on Saturday, with the closing passages read by Joe's widow Valerie Heller and a few others, devoured and delighted in every word.

"There was only one catch and that was Catch-22, which specified that a concern for one's safety in the face of dangers that were real and immediate was the process of a rational mind. Orr was crazy and could be grounded. All he had to do was ask; and as soon as he did, he would no longer be crazy to fly more missions and sane if he didn't, but if he was sane he had to fly them. If he flew them he was crazy and didn't have to; but if he didn't want to he was sane and had to. Yossarian was moved very deeply by the absolute simplicity of this clause of Catch-22 and let out a respectful whistle.

"That's some catch, that 'Catch-22,'" he observed.

"It's the best there is," Doc Daneeka agreed." •

Horse Farm

A Visit With Vito Giambanco And His Family In Eastport

By Janet Berg

With spring in the air and the wind blowing in your hair, there's nothing more fitting than driving on a sunny day up to the "Dream Come True" horse farm in Eastport, a year-round riding facility for horse lovers. As you pull up to the expansive white fencing that surrounds 30 acres of magnificence, thousands of bright yellow dandelions flank the driveway that leads up to the impressive brick estate built eight years ago. You can't help but imagine you are entering the South Fork Ranch of the TV show, Dallas.

But, it was not quite J.R. Ewing who ran up to greet me in all his excitement. Actually, the owner, Vito Giambanco, from Sicily, immediately reminded me of Roberto Benigni; a lovable and sensitive, young-looking 55-year-old man.

I'm sure any passerby on County Road 51 can only be happy for this "dreamer," as you get a sense of freedom and a glimpse of beauty every time you drive by the horses running in the spacious corrals, surrounded by the scenic trails that lead into the Pine Barrens.

"If I see someone stopped on the road, admiring the horses from afar, I'll call out to them, 'Do you like horses?' And if they say, yes, I invite them in," he said.

Karen, a local rider from Manerville, pur-main house, apologizing for its size, but not apologizing for the mess in the car, that we have to sit on. "Excusa mea," he said with his charming Italian accent, "but, I keep the car a mess, so I don't litter outside. I don't like when people litter. It's all here with me." Vito has a way of making you smile and laugh in his company.

"This is my beautiful lady," he said, pointing to Judy, who is sitting on a rider mower, as we pull up. He boasts, "She's not Italian, but she grew one of the biggest cactusas (Italian squash), I've ever seen. It was five-feet long!" She smiles coyly, under her baseball cap. It is very obvious they are family-oriented and down to earth.

As we tour the house that Judy designed and cleans herself, I see photos of their two grown daughters, Maria and Rachael, displayed on the walls. And, like a third daughter, their niece, Concetta DeRosa, lives across the street, and is the riding coordinator and manager.

chased her horse, "Savannah Skye," from the "Dream Come True" horse farm, and also boards there. Headed toward the manicured rings, they clip clop by, picture-perfect for the cover of any equestrian magazine.

Vito invites me into his car to drive up to the

The first question anyone would want to ask this man, of course, is "How did all this happen?" And so, back in the barn, with many little chirping birds flying in and out of the rafters, he tells the story.

"I've been dreaming about riding horses since I can remember. My grandfather and father owned a lot of property in a small town near Palermo, Sicily, growing olives and grapes and lemons, and we worked very, very hard. But we only had Draft horses, which are not the same; they are big and good for pulling, not riding. I'm one of eight children, so by the time he had me, he was aging and not interested in raising horses any longer, which he did for competition in town for the Feast of Jesus. They used to run the horses through the town, for the prestige, not for the money. Looking back, I guess it was kind of dangerous.

"I used to tell him again and again, 'Papa, I want a horse to ride,' but I couldn't get one. When I was about 20 years old, we all came to the United States and opened a restaurant business in Brooklyn and every chance I got, I would ride horses by the Belt Parkway. I started on the trails, but I was all over the place; it was kind of scary. The people there got to know me. I couldn't afford a horse, but I was always crazy for them.

"One day, when my wife Judy was pregnant with our daughter, the owner of the stables came to find me where I was riding, and we both galloped back as fast as we could. I just made it to the hospital on time and Rachael was born minutes later.

"I had an accident about 24 years ago, when a gas oven exploded in my face, and having time in the recovery room, I must have been drawing pictures of my dream farm, but I don't remember doing it, and I had put it away. I found it years later, and it must have stayed in my mind, because this dream farm looks almost exactly like my drawing.

"It's a very difficult business. I must say that I understand the horses a lot more than people, and they understand me. I trust animals. They taught me a lot. They know my every move, my eye movement, and body movement. I can get a horse to do anything; I just need the time with them. It's easy to train the horse if you watch them, what they're telling you. If you see they're aggressive, show them you're not afraid of them; if they're timid, show them, it's okay, I'm not going to hurt you.

"My wife is afraid of heights, so she doesn't get on the horses. When I got my first horse 16 years ago, she named him 'Hope,'" he laughs. She said, "I 'Hope' he won't kill you."

Vito likes to see children learning the proper way to ride a horse, and feels that it's not promoted enough in the media. "My hero was John Wayne," he said. "I never missed a John Wayne movie. To me, he was the perfect man, until I realized differently when I got older. Everybody dreams of going into an open field and jumping on a horse, bareback. But that's a mistake. It's

Dune (continued from page 26)

Here is what he said to a reporter from the Southampton Press, whose article appeared in the edition of that paper last week.

"(Ira Rennert) has totally destroyed the centerpiece of the Sagaponack beaches. It's stunning that anyone would think that this was okay to do. It just screams of arrogance, or ignorance. Standard operating procedure for dune restoration is that you don't just go in with Bobcats and tear down the integrity of the dune, and clearly that's what has happened. It took nature decades to create those dunes and it took Mr. Rennert a few hours to erase them. The company that did the work should be held responsible too. There's no way they should have gone ahead like that. They excavated a path through the (existing) dunes."

I drove down there yesterday and looked at the completed work. It looks like a thousand foot stretch of high sand dunes with beach grass growing on it. Surveyors were there, sent there by the Town, and they told me it was as high or higher than it had to be. It was done, from the property line back, according to the law. Their law.

From the top of the sand dune toward the sea, however, it looked like a sand dune with beach grass on it, which it was, but it looked more Disney-like rather than Sagaponack-like. Ira Rennert, Master of all he Surveys... He could create his own dunes, he could create the castle of his dreams, and he could create his own lawns and landscaping, right down to deciding which blades of grass he wanted to put where.

This is America. A man's home is supposed to be, er, his castle. Sort of.

Well, our elected officials — and we do elect our Trustees — can whoop and holler all they want about this, but the truth is that from what I can see, the natural dunes that Rennert capped are entirely on his property and absolutely none of the new sand is on the publicly owned property administered by the Trustees. Trustee Scott Strough is complaining about property over which he has no jurisdiction.

As far as the town and state are concerned, they have jurisdiction to protect dunes on private property, but apparently they have no laws that control ADDING sand to an existing dune on private property, provided you re-vegetate when you are done.

It is possible that everybody ASSUMED Rennert would put the sand on the public land rather than his own land, therefore not messing with the existing dunes, which have now, through natural migration, wandered backwards onto his property. The permits were likely issued under this assumption. My guess, though, is that Rennert never deliberately decided to do that. He probably just turned the project over to his building people, who are from out of town and who read the permit, and completed the job as they saw fit.

It kind of argues that the three government entities ought to be in better communication, ought to decide exactly how they want to approve things, and then be there when Rennert's Army arrives.

Well, the birds will build new nests, the crabs will dig their way out, the bugs will manage. And someday, an enterprising local man with a lot of scuba gear will conduct day trips on a glass-bottomed boat to see the vast ruins at the bottom of Peter's Pond.

My name is Ozymandias, King of Kings, look on my works, ye Mighty and, despair! •

HANGIN' WITH GEORGE CAN GET YOU INTO HOT WATER.

All I know is, awhile ago, I went into Kazdin Pools & Spas for some pool chemicals.

While wandering around the store, waiting my turn, this charming guy with a big red mustache starts a whole conversation with me about the benefits of spas.

The next thing I know, he's taking me somewhere in his car.

We get to this place (he says it's his home).

In the back yard are a woman, two young girls and a Golden Retriever, (mustache says, his wife & daughters; won't tell me who the retriever is) in this beautiful steaming bubbling contraption.

Anyway, they invited me into it.

It was wonderful. Every muscle relaxed. The tension in my body disappeared.

I haven't felt this good in years.

It's been about three weeks that I'm here. And, I know these people would like all of us (we're now 47) to buy our own spas and go home.

But, they're too polite to ask.

One of us even overheard the guy in the mustache tell his wife that someone named Marquis said "George, maybe you should just have a sale."

article after article describing Spanish atrocities on that island. Why wouldn't America declare war? In the beginning of April 1898, McKinley sent the battleship Maine to Santiago Harbor. American diplomats went ashore for further talks with the Spanish. But that night, the Maine exploded and sank, killing all on board, 300 men. That was America's 9/11 — the next day, the United States declared war.

This was the first time that America sent a military force abroad. We had modern warships by this time. Spain, which had many more warships, had only a few modern ones. One of these, before the war, had been sent to New York Harbor where, as the Maine fired a 21-gun salute in Havana Harbor, fired a 21-gun salute in response. The niceties were being maintained.

After the declaration of war, however, the American Navy hunted down the Spanish navy, trapped many of the ships in Santiago Harbor and sank them, and in a surprise move, sent a force under Admiral Dewey (that's me!) to the Philippines where all the remaining ships of the Spanish Navy were found at anchor in Manila Harbor and sunk one by one. There were no American casualties.

With the sea lanes clear, McKinley ordered

Also in Munich comes a story about an octopus that has learned to open jars with screw-tops. The octopus, a five year old named Frieda, was noticing at feeding time that a handler at the Hellabrunn Zoo assigned to give her shrimp had to twist open a jar to get to the shrimp inside. Sometimes the handler, Frank Mueller, would have to really grunt and strain to get the tops open. One day, watching this, Frieda, seemed to communicate to Mueller that because she was very hungry, she'd like to give him a hand, or a tentacle, to help him out. He threw the jar in with her.

"Depending on how tight the lid is," Mueller told a reporter, "it takes her anywhere from 10 seconds to an hour to get it off."

The octopus uses her own special technique. She grasps the sides of the jar with her tentacles, and then leans her body onto the lid and twists herself. She keeps doing this, twisting herself back and forth on the lid, until it loosens. Then she screws it the rest of the way off with one of her other tentacles to get at the stuff inside.

Freida opens shrimp jars before the public at feeding time twice a week. Call in advance for the schedule.

Now, because you have read this far, I would like to thank you by giving you a very witty thing to say when you see a police car or a fire engine with its sirens on zipping by at very high speed.

Say, "They won't sell much ice cream going at that speed." Next time you are in that situation, try it.

all able bodied young American men to make their way by train to Florida where they would be provided with guns, uniforms and transport to a landing in Cuba. It turned into one of the worst transportation messes in military history, but then this was the first time we ever did this and we had a lot to learn. In the end, we mustered out only about 30,000 troops to Cuba to face the 50,000-man Spanish army there. We were young and strong and confident. They were tired, fed up, stranded in Cuba and now facing not only Cuban rebels in the mountains but the Americans along the shore. They fought two battles, lost both of them, and folded, waving the white flag from Santiago.

America thus took its place on the world stage, joining France, England, Belgium, Holland, Germany, Italy, Russia and Japan. Parades and homecomings were scheduled in small towns all over America. But first, considering the fact that many of the troops had come down with tropical diseases during this short campaign, the government thought it wise that they be returned to just one place, an isolated spot, at the very tip of Long Island, until they either recovered from their fevers or died.

Comparisons to the Iraqi campaign? I leave it to you, dear reader. The lesson learned from William McKinley and Teddy Roosevelt involves personal freedom and democracy and getting along with your neighbors. A hundred and five years ago, those were the lessons learned.

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Observations of an Islander #247

Debt Consolidation

I was checking a biblical reference in Leviticus recently. Whenever I open the Bible for any reason, I always look for problem solvers, or just good loopholes while I'm there. As providence would have it, I found a passage of such benefit to every parent in financial debt, I can't believe it hasn't been covered by Oprah or Dr. Phil. I speak of that famous biblical institution, indentured servitude. I was absolutely ecstatic to learn about it; I went to work right away.

"Hello, Mastercard?"

"Hello, this is Mrs. Merkle. How may I help you?"

"Hello Mrs. Merkle, this is Sally Flynn. You know that money I owe you?"

"Yes?"

"I wanna pay it off right now."

"Cashier's check?"

"No, indentured servitude. You can have my teenager for seven years. Just don't make her sleep in the bosses tent or water other peoples camels."

"I don't think you can do that Ms. Flynn."

"Sure I can. I've taken good care of her these past sixteen years. She's in great shape for hard work."

"Well, yes, but, she doesn't have any training."

"She doesn't need any training. She knows everything already!"

"This is really bizarre. You can't tie your child to a thankless job for seven years."

"And why not? How long have you been tied to that job?"

"I see your point. Does she have keyboard skills?"

"Keyboard skills? Are you kidding me? She can manage six conversations on AOL simultaneously while eating chips, drinking Coke and crackin' nuts with her feet!"

"Hmmm very impressive. Any phone skills?

Can she handle being on the phone for hours and sometimes having to cut people off?"

"Whaddaya kiddin' me? Can Perlman play the violin? My daughter can talk for hours on end without food or water. And cut people off? She can cut people off with surgical precision, like when she calls to ask me if she can stay out another hour and just as I start to answer, the line is dead!"

"Well, this is highly unusual, but it sure sounds like it has potential. Of course, there are practical concerns, like food, shelter and clothing."

"Not as complicated as you think. She can live off the snack machines like she does now, she can sleep on any couch like she does now since her bed is covered in clothes. And, I'll send all her clothes with her. They don't fit me and they're not my colors anyway. So you see, I think this is really manageable. I can bring her to you personally. She can just work for you and you can deduct her work hours from my Mastercard balance. Wouldn't you like to do something other than be there right now?"

"A personal arrangement? Wow, you know, I ran out of vacation time and my sister's wedding is next month."

"You see, you don't want to disappoint your sister do you Mrs. Merkle? After all she's done for you?"

"Yeah, she has been a great sister."

"It can work, I tell you!"

"Seven years is a long time though."

"I'll tell you what Mrs. Merkle. You're right, seven years is a lot. Lets start out with a trial period, say two years."

"And then I'll send her back to you when she's eighteen?"

"No, no, that won't be necessary. We can just let her go at that point."

"You wouldn't want me to send her back?"

"No. It'll take me two years to clean her room, if you send her back, she'll just mess it up again right away. But you know what, let her charge some luggage and some clothes on my account to get her started in the world."

"Yes, but Ms Flynn, that will put your account back where you started."

"Don't worry about a thing Mrs. Merkle, I have a son, too."

Preview I: Rock Concert

By Tarah Kennedy

There's tons of hype about the upcoming rock concerts taking place in Riverhead during June and August. People are nervous about the traffic and how it will affect those trekking east for those weekends. So just to assure those worried drivers that it really won't be that bad, I'm taking the opportunity to share my own experience driving to a rock concert.

We were on our way to witness Phish introduce the millennium at Big Cypress Seminole Indian Reservation near Ft. Lauderdale, Florida. With 70,000 acres, the reservation could comfortably fit the 75,000 expected guests who would be camping out for five days. But with only one road to enter the park, appropriately labeled Alligator Alley, a New York-type gridlock was duplicated in southern Florida. The Florida Highway Patrol had warned travelers who were commuting between the East and West coasts to add extra time to their drive, but no one could have prepared for the wait that would ensue.

When a man sleeping on the roof of a vehicle fell off and was killed by the driver who had forgotten about him, it caused 15-hour traffic jams extending 20 miles long, according to a Rolling Stone article. But for me and my friends attending the concert, we didn't know about this accident until after the event.

Relying on the memory of my college friend and fellow Phish fan, Sarah Hattman, I asked her what she recollected from the car ride, as we had thought it would only take three hours, at the most, to drive from my house in Stuart, Fla to the venue. We had met about 15 other college friends at a destination so that we could follow one another into the reservation, guaranteeing us all being able to camp together. So after lining up the four cars and one RV, we were on our way.

Sarah told me that while I was driving most of the way, I began getting tired from the heat and monotony, so she took the wheel. While we were equipped with water and food, she said we passed the time by walking around to our friend's cars and peeing in the ditches across the street. But it was when nighttime set in, that the natives began getting restless.

Apparently, it was after I fell asleep that our friends leading the pack took the initiative to get into the park before everyone else. So we had no choice but to follow them, driving on the shoulder all the way into the entrance of the venue. I asked Sarah if we had felt guilty at the time for cutting off those patiently waiting, and she said she didn't care. She was tired and wanted this to be over. We had spent 14 hours in the car.

This past account has almost no relevance, except for the fact that the town of Riverhead is planning to host a similar event in June, but this one lasting only two days and Phish not listed on the lineup. Entitled "Field Day," the music extravaganza on June 7-8 has about 37 bands confirmed, so far, with major acts Radiohead and Beastie Boys headlining. Although the concert facility at Enterprise Park in Calverton is not as vast as Big Cypress with only 1,000 acres and camping is limited to two nights, the concert does expect about 60,000 guests per day.

So the relevance pertains to traffic. Summertime in the Hamptons already boasts stop-and-go traffic on the LIE and Route 27, and that's without a rock fest throwing a wrench in the highway. Directions, as of this time, haven't been posted on the concert's Web site (www.fielddayfest.com), but it does warn that traffic can be expected. Also, the event does not confine fans to stay for both days so gridlock can show it's ugly face at any time.

Local authorities have voiced their concerns over the event since Riverhead has fewer than 30,000 residents year-round, so how could they prepare for a population twice that size? "We're in uncharted territory at this point," said Town Councilwoman Barbara Blass in a Newsday article. "I have no way of determining what we're in for." But then again, Riverhead is receiving $150,000 for the event so perhaps they can learn to deal.

And traffic is always to be expected for anyone heading east during those long-awaited summer months, but is a recap of Phish 2000 in the air? Then again, even if the June event goes smoothly with only a minor amount of gridlock, just wait until August.

Enterprise Park has also been marked for the Bonnaroo Music Festival from August 8-10. Because the original fest from June 13-15 in Manchester, Tennessee sold out its 80,000 tickets in 17 days, promoters Superfly Productions thought it to be a good idea to host a sister event, but this time, in Riverhead. This 2003 lineup consists more of a folksy, jazzy and alternative rock lineup than the mainstream Field Day one. But with one additional day of camping and an estimated 20,000 more fans expected than the June event, those who commute to the Hamptons for summertime weekends should probably just start crying now.

But as my friend Sarah said, she didn't mind the traffic since it was part of the experience of going to a really great concert. "I was there to have a good time, and that's what I did," she said.

Perhaps Hamptons' renters should just go with the flow and attend these concerts, as perhaps music could ease their traffic-induced worries. If you can't pass 'em, join 'em.

Farm (continued from page 36)

like walking without shoes. If I have shoes, I wear them. If I have a saddle, I use it. If you don't know what you're doing, you can lose your life. The worst enemy of a horse is their own fear. If they see a piece of paper fly in front of them, they can jump and create a lot of damage."

Suddenly, the demonstrative Vito jumps up and down on the barn floor and startles me, but I notice the horse doesn't budge.

"If you don't train them like this, you better say your prayers," he explained. "Don't ever tell a child they will never fall. If you 'really' ride, sooner or later, you'll fall, unless you just sit on the horse and do nothing. If you don't fall, you never rode."

Later, Concetta tells me they have a group of orphans from St. Mary's Children's Service in Syosset come every week. They have to match the ability of the person to the horse. Even grooming a horse is very soothing for these children.

The Giambanco's told me there are about 50 horses on the farm, but all their own personal horses born on the farm have the name "Dream" in it, so the animals can continue the dream. "There's "Dream Cat," "Jet Blue Dream," "Phantom Dream," "Storm Dream," "Summer Dream," and the one that will be born any moment will be... Vito looks questioningly at his wife; "What will we name it?" he asks. "There has to be a dream in it!"

Vito admits "Maybelline" is his favorite horse because she's a real challenge to him or anyone that tries to ride her. "She dumped me on the ground more than any of the others," he smiled, as if that satisfied him. She's 7-years-old, but she's so quick and powerful, like an electric shock."

"Then there's 'Phantom Dream,' who will be my #1. I'll show him next year. He'll be two in August. He is very well bred. His father, 'Salute Two' was the best horse in '96, and made a lot more money than all of the other horses, grand prix level. He's very famous. His mother, 'Brandy,' is not famous now, but his grandmother is 'Caribbean Queen,' also well known, and 'Land of King,' is the grandfather. So, he's got a very good blood line on both sides, called 'warm blood.' This kind of breed is Bavarian from Germany," he says proudly, petting "Phantom Dream," "and will mature to about 17 hands (height) and weigh between 1500 to 1800 pounds. Look at this baby's bones!"

Then we enter the stall (rather awkwardly) of the very pregnant "Out of the Belle," who is ready to deliver at any time, and I witness the special device attached to her that will automatically alarm the family when yet another dream is about to be added to the barn. I am awed by the sight of a one-month old and a six-month old baby as they nudge their mothers.

From the day they're born, Vito starts training them; "as soon as they are delivered from the mother, I come out with my own recipe," he said, perhaps in recollection of the restaurant business. "How I do it, is phenomenal — I stroke them, and desensitize every part of their body, and don't let them get up until I do what I have to do, always staying in very close contact with the horse."

I asked if he's like the horse whisperer and he laughed, "The horse whisperer knows little next to me... I'm a showoff."

"I try to stay local for my wife, but we sometimes go out of state for lessons too; and also to different people on Long Island, like Bob Ginsberg, who is head of the North Fork Classic."

When asked if he's fulfilled all his dreams, he answered, "I love jumping. My dream is to one day get to the grand prix level." I notice a staggering of five-foot fences in the background that seem to grow higher with his words.

As I drive away, I see a cloud of dust in my rear view mirror, leaving this whole other world — this "field of dreams" — behind me, and for an instant I see the image of Roberto Benigni once again... but, of course, it's like a dream, where life on this farm certainly is beautiful. •

Dan's North Fork Urbane Cowboy

Audience Wanted: Broadway Show With Great Tunes, Boundless Enthusiasm, And Lots Of Heart

By Susan Whitney Simm

More than one movie has been inspired by a play. But how many movies get a second life as a Broadway musical? Some theatre critics would say too many. Others recognize that sometimes you just have to follow your dream.

It all began back in 1978 when Esquire editor Clay Felker gave journalist Aaron Latham an assignment to write a boy-meets-girl article about love in blue-collar southern Texas. Latham goes to a red-neck bar and interviews people until he finds a couple, late at night, who had fallen in love. Two years later, John Travolta starred in Urban Cowboy, the result of Latham's being tapped to turn his successful piece into a hit movie. Who can forget Debra Winger riding the mechanical bull into stardom at Gilley's honky-tonk?

But then a funny thing happened. In 1997, Latham, a native Texan from a rural town called Spur, was married to Leslie Stahl and living the good life on Manhattan's Upper West Side when he received a letter from producer and fellow Texan Phil Oesterman proposing Urban Cowboy as a Broadway musical.

"Phil always wanted to do Urban Cowboy as a musical," said Jerry Silverstein in a recent interview at the Baiting Hollow home he shares with wife Elaine. "So he sent Aaron a letter, which he promptly lost in his study. Leslie said to him, 'Aaron, you've GOT to find that letter!' So he finally finds it and has Phil over and Phil gets him hooked on his dream." That dream became a reality when Urban Cowboy opened on Broadway on March 27.

Jerry Silverstein is a local songwriter whose song "Dances Turn Into Dreams" is in the Broadway musical. His other job is teaching English, theater, and media at the Prodell Middle School in Shoreham-Wading River, something he's done for the past 30 years. How did a school teacher become a Broadway songwriter? To tell that story is also to tell the story of how a movie became a play.

"I've been writing songs since I was a teenager," said Jerry. "I wrote music for school plays in college, and my dream was to become a folksinger." But, as he puts it, "life happened," and he decided to become a teacher. It wasn't until 1992 that Jerry would seriously rekindle his old love.

"I took Greenport songwriter Hugh Prestwood's class at the New School, and he recommended going to Nashville. And I did in 1994. I networked, attended classes, wrote songs, and really got involved. I started pitching songs, going to publishers, and eventually realized that it must be working because I was getting a better class of rejection letter."

Jerry would eventually become the Long Island coordinator for the Nashville Songwriters Association International (NSAI). In fact, he runs a workshop once a month at Five Towns College.

Jerry and Elaine also dance. (This is the part where middle school teacher meets Broadway.) They were at a country weekend in New Jersey taking a workshop in West Coast Swing when instructor Robert Royston mentioned that he was going to be doing the choreography for a show on Broadway. The show turned out to be Urban Cowboy. As Jerry and Robert got to know one another, Robert gave him the director, Phil they re-wrote the show. At that point, I thought for sure my song would get cut.

"So we go down to Florida, Coconut Grove, and I didn't know up until the day the show opened whether or not my song made the cut. I had 25 relatives in the audience! And there were so many problems. The $750,000 set wasn't moving, the bull wasn't working, previews had to be cancelled. But eventually it all came together and my relatives showed up and I see my song for the first time on the playbill and it was just wonderful."

Urban Cowboy got good reviews in Florida, but still got rewritten again before heading to Broadway. Everyone wanted it to be just perfect.

The show follows the movie except for a few additional parts. And the inspiration for the characters comes straight from Latham's observations the night he was on assignment for Esquire.

"I went there that night looking for a girl and boy who'd met there," says Latham in the playbill. "I wanted him to work at a refinery." No one fit the bill until, finally, at two in the morning, "a girl came in and rode the bull standing up. It turned out that she'd met her husband at Gilley's. Their wedding reception was at Oesterman's, phone number – Phil and Aaron Latham were in the process of making Urban Cowboy into a musical – and Jerry, as L.I. coordinator for NSAI, ended up getting Phil and Aaron into contact with many of the pro songwriters who were members. Within no time, forty of the best songwriters in Nashville were doing live auditions.

"All of these people who were my heroes were there pitching songs for the show," said Jerry. But it soon became apparent that the songs would have to be written around the "book" (equivalent of a movie script) for the play, not vice versa. So writers offered to write original songs for show. Among them was Jerry.

"I wrote four songs, and one made the cut. I wrote it knowing that it would be performed by a black female blues singer with tremendous range. The scene is last call at Gilley's and Jesse (Rozz Morehead), Gilley's manager, is singing a song about the scene that's playing out before her. The song is punctuated by dialogue. It's a slow, sexy blues and the main characters, Sissy and Bud, have just had a fight and are doing their best to make each other jealous by dancing provocatively with others (Sissy with Wes, the villain, and Bud with Pam, the rich oil man's daughter.) As the scene plays out Jesse sings:

*If you wait enough time all the boys look handsome
If you drink enough beer all the girls look so fine
If you hear enough lies you start to believe them
Though they were bulls—t when you walked in here at nine*

"Phil was a maverick," said Jerry. "He and Latham worked on this play for years. And finally, they're getting ready for Broadway – that's when I meet them and write the song – by going to Florida for an out-of-town tryout. Then, suddenly, Phil dies. The producers, Leonard Soloway and Chase Mishkin, aren't sure what to do. But they call in some favors and bring in Lonny Price as director, who had done A Class Act on Broadway, and he brought in Tony winner Jason Robert Brown as musical director, and, all together,

Food And Wine "Oscars": And The Winner Is...

Often called the "Oscars of the food world," the annual James Beard Foundation Awards is the national culinary industry's biggest party. The awards ceremony, this year held on May 5 at New York's Marriott Marquis, honored Le Bernardin's Eric Ripert as the nation's top toque, who beat out nominees Nobu Matsuhisa of Manhattan's Nobu, Alfred Portale of Gotham Bar and Grill, Mario Batali of Babbo, and Tom Colicchio of Gramercy Tavern. Tapped as best new restaurant was another Manhattanite, L'Impero, which also won for best design, thanks to New York firm Vicente Wolf Associates. Top award for wine service went to Restaurant Daniel's Jean Luc Le Du.

James Beard is recognized by many as the father of American gastronomy. Today, Beard's restored Manhattan home, located in Greenwich Village, has become the James Beard House, a mecca for our country's top gastronomic talents, thanks to the efforts of Julia Child and Peter Kump. And on the evening of May 16, Matthew Murphy of Antares Café and Kip Bedell of Bedell Cellars and Corey Creek Vineyard, team up for a memorable evening of culinary delights at the New York landmark.

Chef Murphy, owner/chef of Antares in Greenport, is one of the East End's top culinary stars. An inductee into the James Beard Foundation's Who's Who of Food & Beverage, Murphy comes to us via New York's Ritz Carlton Hotel, Rainbow Room, and a long sojourn in southern Italy. Antares features an international menu with an emphasis on local ingredients, and for this special evening Murphy plans to serve, among other treats, Long Island duck confit with candied orange, and Peconic Bay scallops with white truffle oil. Winemaker extraordinaire Kip Bedell will supply the luscious Domaine CC Rosé, 1999 Bedell Cupola, and the 2000 Corey Creek Reserve Chardonnay, among other wines from the two vineyards.

For reservations call the James Beard House at 212-627-2308.

What's Happening On The North Fork

Big Event Of The Week

"Orient By The Sea" Opens For Another Season

There are many fine restaurants here on the North Fork. But some close up for the slow winter months, leaving the stalwarts to feed the hungry locals. So when spring arrives and the seasonal restaurateurs emerge from their winter hiatus, it's time for celebration. And weren't we in luck last Friday evening when, hoping for good timing, I called Bob Hasse's place in Orient and... someone answered!

"Table for two at 8:30?" asked the familiar voice on the other end. "No problem. Come on over."

The Hasse family has owned and operated Orient By The Sea restaurant and marina, a stone's throw from the Cross Sound Ferry, for the last quarter century. Little has changed in the homey décor of the dining room, and those in the know like it that way. Knotty pine still lines the walls of "the porch" (a favorite dining location), and the shrimp cocktail is still priced in the single digits. And for those of you more into turf than surf, the prime rib, frequently offered as a special, is the best on the East End.

After being warmly greeted by host Bob at the door, our favorite waitress, Lorraine, made menus unnecessary as she effortlessly remembered our favorite appetizers and entrees (she even remembered that we were in the process of restoring a farmhouse in Cutchogue!). And when my pristine little necks on the half shell arrived, it was clear that enthusiastic chef Peggy Hocking is still at home on the Viking range in the kitchen. Suddenly, the memory of the long, dreary winter melted away. It was just as if one of our favorite dining spots had never closed.

"The porch" at Orient By The Sea

4 Shorts: A Workshop At The Vail-Leavitt Music Hall In Riverhead

By Denise Bornschein

It was a beautiful Sunday afternoon only a few weeks after the threat of a possible third World War. We were sitting in a dark studio at the Vail-Leavitt Music Hall in Riverhead, listening to the readings of recent works by four passionate, local writers, all of which pertained to war. Each author emphasized different aspects of war and its effect on the individuals involved. All dealt with very controversial topics. But luckily, as American citizens, we are still able to vocalize these opinions.

The workshop was held May 2 through May 4 and was presented by the Vail-Leavitt Theatre Company!, which has been organized by Stacy Dermont (executive director of this production) and co-producer Toni Munna. The Theatre Company! is currently seeking nonprofit status and is based at the Vail-Leavitt Music Hall on Peconic Avenue in Riverhead, which is now under major renovations. A grand opening of the beautiful renovated hall is scheduled for June 7.

The Vail-Leavitt was built in 1881 as an opera house but was never used as such. As legend has it, the town didn't want to be given a bad name by calling the opera house a theatre because of the disreputable reputation of actors during this time. The hall itself, an architectural gem, is located on the second floor of the Peconic Avenue building, above what used to be retail stores run by the Leavitt family. Today, the stores are gone and in their place is the Mini Cine, a street-level studio theatre that is being used for local productions while renovations continue on the hall upstairs.

It was here in the Mini Cine that we heard the works in progress of four talented writers. The first, From a Dark Pool of Water, a one-act play written by Julie Doane Roberts, deals with a Vietnam veteran coping with post-traumatic stress. While having a conversation with his young nephew about the horrors of war, and possibly trying to convince him not to enlist, the uncle has several flashbacks portraying graphic images of his injury as well as violent killings he witnessed. Sadly, despite his uncle's stories, the nephew decides that he still wants to be a soldier.

The second work in progress, Pass the Nuts, was written by Lisa Reitman-Dobi, and is more a debate than a play. It deals with two women at a cocktail party in Manhattan discussing a contemporary theme, the United States "liberation" of the Iraqis from Saddam Hussein. The viewpoint of the author is definitely slanted toward the right, and the play does raise some very interesting issues about living in a democratic country. It also illustrates the fact that men and women alike are now passionately debating topics that were once frowned upon at cocktail parties.

The third presentation, Peterson's War, written by none other than our very own Dan Rattiner, deals with issues prevalent in the late '80s, a time when the two Super Powers, Russia and the United States, were arguing over the disarmament of their respective nuclear weapons. The United States under the Reagan administration was spending billions on anti-ballistic weaponry, only to later discover that the entire Russian infrastructure was crumbling. Dan uses very interesting stage directions, as well as a narrator to emphasize them. He depicts an actual war-in-progress where the Russians and the United States are in the process of bombing each other. The leaders of these two Superpowers, including the president of the U.S., are safe in bomb shelters (possibly for 3 or more years), while the military is defending the world and the average citizen sacrifices his or her life. The twist is that Major General Peterson, the orchestrator of this event, has succeeded in creating a fake war between the two countries for the sole purpose of getting rid of the creators and egos of the war.

The last reading was a monologue called Mourning, written by Esther Mott. It tells the story of a mother who loses her son to war. I did empathize with the mother who loved her son and built solid roots for him only for him to be taken away by war. But the author's metaphorical use of cornfields to establish a homegrown feel as well as to possibly signify the establishment that took away her son, was a little bit of a stretch.

Gilley's. But they broke up and she went off with the guy who was running the bull, and he went off with an uptown girl. Then one day the sheriff arrests the guy running the bull, who had escaped from jail in Oklahoma and was hiding out at Gilley's."

A lot of the dialogue comes from Aaron's own life.

"He grew up fairly poor in Spur, Texas," said Jerry. "There's a line in the show that his father always used to say – the wind blows so hard in Spur that when it stops blowing, all the chickens fall over. There are all of these lines from his childhood there in the play."

But despite the Florida reviews and all the effort,

All of these writers and actors deserve a round of applause, not only for coming up with such original thoughts, but also for allowing the audience to ask questions and discuss the works in an open forum after the show. We were asked if a common theme was present throughout the performances, and for me the answer was "War is Hell." As American citizens we are very lucky to be part of a country that defends democracy, but as we learned from these performances, there is always a price: a mother's heart is broken, a strong man's mind crumbles, people argue at a party. Maybe the only solution is to put the egoistic leaders in bomb shelters?

Thank you to the Vail Leavitt Theatre Company! for such a thought-provoking day. I am really looking forward to their production of Agnes of God coming up in June.

The Vail Leavitt Theatre and Mini Cine are located at 18 Peconic Avenue, Riverhead. Agnes of God will run from June 13-15 and 20-22 at the Vail Leavitt Mini Cine. For tickets and information call 631-369-4661.

the show has not been a unanimous hit here on Broadway. After opening on Thursday evening, March 27, and playing to extremely enthusiastic audiences, it has received mixed to negative reviews. (The most enthusiastic reviews were from Clive Barnes in the N.Y. Post, WOR, and the Star Ledger.) Now the show faces the uphill battle of creating an audience through word of mouth at a time when tourism is down throughout the city.

"It's easy to write an interesting review when you're tearing something apart," said Jerry. "There is a lot of resentment by New York theatre people over the trend on Broadway to take movies and convert them into plays and musicals. Because of the high stakes, producers are afraid to bring shows to Broadway without a known name or bankable stars. Following in the steps of Footloose and Saturday Night Fever, Urban Cowboy was an easy target. The irony is that so many of the creative team are true Broadway veterans. I just hope that the show is able to find its audience during these difficult economic times when Broadway is struggling."

After initially announcing that they would close the show after four performances, producers Soloway and Mishkin received over 750 phone calls urging them to keep the show open. They made the decision to extend the run at the 11th hour and announced it to a tearful cast much to the delight of the sold-out audience.

"I have watched the creative team and the actors nurture this play into a tremendously entertaining musical. I am so impressed with their talent and integrity, not to mention their incredible heart. Night after night audiences leave the theater smiling. The trick now is to get them in the door."

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

QUALITY

Rolls Royce used to have an advertising slogan that went something like "The high initial price is soon forgotten, but the quality lingers on." This can be said of many cars, past and present, but sometimes you don't always get what you pay for.

Take Rolls Royce for instance. Arguably, both Rolls and its twin, Bentley, have the most tasteful and most beautiful interiors of any cars in production. They are so well done that many manufacturers like Mercedes, Range Rover and even Lexus have mimicked them in their high-end luxury models. The Rolls Royce brothers also have beautifully executed paint work and chrome detailing.

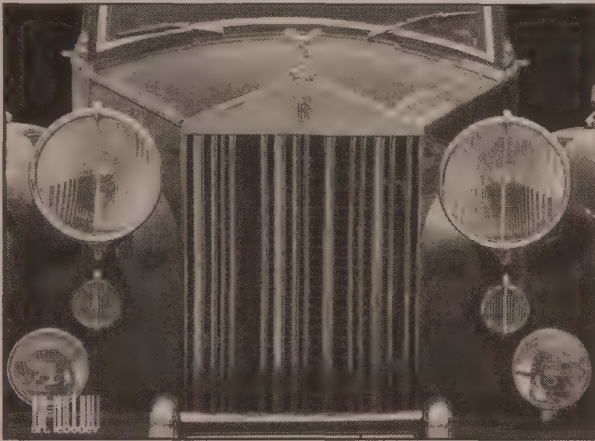

The one failing of the Brits is that they have been, by modern standards, dependability impoverished. Improbable as it seems, these autos have had electrical problems since the early 1950s. In retrospect, the same can be said about virtually any car ever produced in Britain.

Many years ago, I had at my disposal a new 1965 Rolls Royce Silver Cloud sedan, which, because it was the cliché rich man's ride, was used extensively as a movie prop. My company, "Cars For Films," supplied this car, and we were always worried if it would make it to location, or even through the day.

Whenever the producer or director requested the Rolls, I always tried to convince them to take a “Grosser” Mercedes instead, but no, they demanded the Rolls, because let’s face it, it had established the image. In all fairness to Rolls Royce, I’m sure their dependability has greatly improved today, but in those days, it was dismal.

Speaking of Mercedes, I'm also under the impression that these guys can't produce an inexpensive car. When their first modern entry level car, the Honda Accord-sized 190 sedan premiered around 1984, it was a quality control disaster. Many of them were purchased, especially in diesel form, to be used as taxicabs in Germany. Their breakdown rate and quality was so bad that the German taxicab drivers went on strike until Mercedes rectified the problems with these 190s. If my memory serves me correctly, I do believe that the then president of Mercedes lost his job over the incident.

In the 1990s, the low priced “C” class Mercedes Benz automobiles had their share of very un-Mercedes like problems. I personally owned a 1994 “C” class sedan that my wife used daily. It had one of the roughest running modern four-cylinder engines in production, and was fraught with electrical problems. I finally sold it after eight months of ownership, because I was putting on too much weight hanging around the MB customer service center munching their free donuts and coffee. The relatively cheap "C" class Mercedes was one of the worst cars I have ever owned, but conversely, the 1985 relatively inexpensive Mercedes 500 that graced my garage for half a decade was one of the best cars I've ever driven. Perhaps Mercedes should leave the low priced vehicles to Honda!

Of course, in the old days, quality in cars was rare. American cars were slammed together, with body panels that had gaps between them that were unbelievably wide. The only saving grace was that the simple, slow revving big-bore engines seemed to run forever with little maintenance.

The German Mercedes, Porsches and even Volkswagen Beetles of the '50s and '60s were beautifully produced, but they all had a serious rust problem. All Porsches, until 1976, when Porsche went to using galvanized steel, are considered to be rust buckets.

English and Italian cars, with the exception of Ferrari, always had their share of “interesting” quality control problems, from rust to electronics.

Then there were the French cars. My credo was "Never buy a French car unless you live in Paris," although I did own a lovely Peugeot 404 station wagon and a radical 1965 Citroen ID 19 sedan. These automobiles just needed lots of attention to keep them running right, but they were practical and enjoyable. In this political climate, a new French car on the streets of the US might be considered an oddity.

Car quality today can be so superior that I have zero tolerance for those that have problems

Away At School... By David Lion Rattiner

Hair Discovery

It is officially warm enough to wear shorts and a T-shirt. It felt like this winter was never going to end. Luckily, however, the sun crept out from behind the clouds and came shining down onto the Northeast like a warm blanket.

When warm weather is combined with college students, footballs, Frisbees, and sunglasses, I can't think of a better place in the world to be (besides the Hamptons of course) than on a college campus at the beginning of spring. When springtime arrives, colleges across the globe are transformed from quiet, academic institutions into energetic, student playgrounds.

Spring is the season before summer, which of course is what most people would vote as their favorite time of year. However, I sometimes think that spring is the best season because it is the season before summer. In a way, spring is like living in a perpetual Thursday. You appreciate Thursday because it is the day that is before Friday. Some people find Friday's kind of depressing because you know that the weekend has already started and is going to be over in just two days. Spring allows you to constantly be excited about summer and gives you some great weather at the same time. I have no complaints about springtime.

It was so nice the other day that my friends, Jim and Laura, decided that we would walk out to the Fenway, which is a public park very close to campus, and throw a football around. All of us were in shorts and T-shirts and we brought towels, some water, sunscreen and a football.

We walked to the park, found a good spot to set up camp, then put down our towels on the ground and took off our shirts to get some sun. I started to throw the football with Jim and Laura but they were not really in the mood.

"Hey man, I think that I just want to lay out for a while."

"You're going to put on sunscreen, right dude?"

"Ugh, you are always annoying me with the sunscreen, Dave. I won't get tan if I put it on."

"Yes you will. Stop acting like a girl and put it on."

Jim took the bottle and squirted out some Coppertone sunscreen with an SPF of 15 and started to rub it onto his face, arms and legs, and finally onto his chest. Jim handed over the sunscreen to me and I squirted some into my hands then passed it to Laura who tried to use some but there was not enough left for her in the bottle. "I've got to run back and get a new bottle of sunscreen, this one has run out."

Laura ran off at a steady jog back towards campus to go buy some. While I was rubbing in the sunscreen on my arms I looked over at Jim and noticed that he was staring down at his chest and appeared to be examining it.

"What the hell are you doing dude?"

Jim spoke calmly, not looking up from his chest, "When did this whole chest hair thing happen? It's like I woke up this morning, saw the sun outside and got excited to run around without a shirt on, and now I got all this crazy chest hair."

He let out a big sigh.

"It is normal, man," I said. "We are old men now. We are 19 and 20 and we got chest hair. Next thing you know we'll be going bald. The party is over for us; we'll never get married and raise a family now. Chicks don't dig chest hair. We missed our window; our youth came and went. It's crazy how fast it went. It was just yesterday that I could walk around with my shirt off and not have any chest hair."

"Yours isn't as bad as mine is"

"Yes it is, you just notice it more on yourself."

"I'm going to pull some out with my fingers."

Jim took his index fingers and thumbs and began yanking out chest hairs one by one from his chest. I became intrigued and started to do the same.

Me: "Ow"

Jim: "Ow"

Me: "OW!"

Jim: "OW!"

At this point Laura is back.

"What in God's name are the two of you doing?"

I looked up at Laura with a straight face, "We are pulling out our chest hairs so that we can get married and raise a family."

ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

CHAMBERLAIN AND NAMUTH AT GUILD HALL

At first glance, works by sculptor John Chamberlain and photographer Hans Namuth seem miles apart. But like her past curating endeavors, Christine Strassfield has a knack for juxtaposing provocative individual artists to reveal their similarities.

Which is not to suggest that Guild Hall's current show is meant to be about the artists' commonalities. Each man's work is meant to be experienced as a single entity. Even so, their parallelism provides the real subtext in this critic's view.

That both Chamberlain's and Namuth's imagery are iconic is the first consideration, whether it's the former's crushed cars or the latter's Los Todos Indians. While Chamberlain's pieces may be a homage to pop culture and Namuth's pictures are an ode to more archetypal figures, we could reverse the past-present proposition: Chamberlain has done iconic, ancient masks and Namuth has photographed mythic modern artists like Jackson Pollock.

Moreover, both men give their work a stylization recalling theatricalism: showy, stagy, stern, and scenic. In a word, dramatic. Consider Chamberlain's bold bright colors and compositions that are anything but subtle. Namuth's Indians are posed as well, often featuring people in costumes, which would make an appropriate complement to Chamberlain's masks.

That Chamberlain's cars resemble posed figures is another trait they share with Namuth's Indians. But the act of "posing" serves another purpose besides being associated with stylization. The cars signify the manifestation of "organized chaos," an idea that makes more sense than it ever did in the wake of the Iraqi War.

Thus, Chamberlain's sculptures seem particularly meaningful in an anxious time, when we cannot put a name or a form to the sense of unpredictability surrounding us. His works may be disconcerting and abstract, but they are also visible, tangible evidence of what we may fear. Look at any of his individual pieces, with all their twisted metal and sharp edges, and feel relieved, somehow. It's as though the world, spinning out of control, has stopped for one brief minute so we can get a grip on things.

This show will be on view at East Hampton's Guild Hall until July 27.

HONORING THE ARTIST: CUCA ROMLEY

This week's cover, "Home Sweet Home," by Cuca Romley is the kind of work that offers a welcome relief to the forthcoming Hampton's summer. I recall a more peaceful time when things were not as hectic on the East End as it also brings comfort to those returning another season in the sun.

The painting is typical of Ms. Romley's subject matter and technique: old-fashioned images complemented by a primitive style. She has created other such works, featuring new York's Flatiron Building and Union Square; it's no wonder that she has turned her attentions to similar pieces when she would visit the East End. Now that Ms. Romley is living in Sag Harbor on a permanent basis, we can expect to see more locale settings and less of Manhattan.

We ask if Ms. Romley will miss New York. "Well, I won't have the pressure to create like I did in Manhattan, but I loved living there. I came from France where I resided in 1969 to spend a month in New York and I never went back to Paris," she responded with enthusiasm.

It's apparent that Ms. Romley can adapt quickly to new surroundings; she grew up near the Prado in Madrid, Spain, went to art school in Italy (where she studied set design, thus her interest in furniture), went to Paris (attending the Beaux Artes there) and worked in advertising.

Ms. Romley fills in the gaps: "I was not a starving artist. I had some top clients in advertising and left Paris for New York at the top of my field. On my second day in New York, I found a client and an agent. Of course, I lived a lot of places in Manhattan from Park and Lexington to SoHo and then to Murray Hill." (Ms. Romley says all this at breakneck speed and with a charming kind of pride at her good fortune.)

Currently, while Ms. Romley is finally settled in one place, she is busy preparing a new venture: the establishment of a gallery in her apartment – studio space. The venue will include a myriad of work, from her own etchings, and customer designed furniture to works by other artists.

In the meantime, Ms. Romley expects to enjoy the village life of Sag Harbor. "I never lived in a small town before," she confesses. "If I were to live anywhere else, I'd have to consider the weather. I don't think Paris is a good place in that regard. It's always raining. The main thing is, I hope the planet keeps turning around. I can paint any place."

– Marion Wolberg Weiss

Call Ms. Romley at 631-725-0097 for more information about her new gallery.

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood in The Hamptons

All In The Family movies? Sure, they're called genres (excuse the French, I don't want the White House on my tail). Movies of the same species go far beyond film noir. (Excuse moi, again, Monsieur Bush). Genre movies run the gamut from "family" movies to "horror" movies. Many times "family" movies are horrific, in my view. You can't contain a species.

It Runs In The Family, runs into other genres like cheap jeans in a white linen wash. The "family" is Kirk and Michael Douglas' publicist's dream. Grandpa Kirk's comeback from a damaging stroke and Michael's second marriage to a younger woman are worthy efforts, but the "selling" of them (like Mike selling the wedding pictures of his millions-of-dollars ceremony) give them the heavy scent of paid political messages, the promotion and publicity of self. Who needs it? Now, as producer and star of Family Run, Michael drags mom and son into the running, along with dad and the promoters. All this reminds me of earlier years when ad man Jerry Della Femina sold his family name to title a vaginal spray. His mother gave him what for! Do you blame her? The selling of families may not be a rotten thing, however, the aroma it gives off is not exactly

It Runs In The Family & Confidence

Lily of the Valley.

The Douglas "clan" (an ad man's re-titling) comes to their movie with all the baggage of a carnival. Therapy hangs over them like a rubber sword, bluntly bouncing their conflicts around the confusion of the show biz Douglas family from the movies' Grombergs. You may enjoy figuring out where reality meets fiction. Perhaps, since the movie pictures them as totally unlikable, some might find the sideshow commendable.

Hardly on the recommended list is Confidence, which casts itself into a type of film noir mode. Adopting the style and dialogue of the classic genre doesn't make it so. As we've shown: What's in a name? A stinker by any other title or category still smells, with or without the deodorizing capability of high-class names. Edward Burns and Dustin Hoffman try to cover the film's problems but the problems are too potent. Burns helps a lot. His Irish-from-Long Island-don't-give-a-damn, cold attractiveness makes his con-artist part slicko and part dumbo, and somewhat believable, in spite of lines that catch in the throat like a death rattle. He manages, too, to make his way, with his gang, through a mine field of over-stylized double crosses and blind U-turns of plot that cross and criss-cross in a confidence game, not unlike 3 card monte. Hoffman, as a stubby gangster, warns Burns, "Style can get you killed." If that's true, Dustin's a jerky, antic, gum-chewing, ham of a dead man in this flick. The low-life he overplays (with strippers in the background, natch) isn't nearly as tough or as mighty as his name, King. Titles, again. The movie does appear to have been made with confidence; it even includes a course in confidence gamesmanship. Don't try it at home. Getting a jerk to transfer $5 million to a bank in Belize ain't easy. Heh, heh.

ED KOCH Goes To THE MOVIES

Movie Review: "The Dancer Upstairs" (-)

John Malkovich killed this film with his direction. It had so much going for it but was all for naught. I saw him on the Charlie Rose show discussing this flick and thought he was very pretentious, but I decided to see it, because revolutionary themes are always intriguing to me. Regrettably, Malkovich's turgid and sometimes incomprehensible plot made for an often boring film.

The movie is based on the book of the same title written by Nicholas Shakespeare. It takes place in a South American Republic dominated by an authoritarian regime not yet totally repressive, fascist or communist. The governmental conflict is similar to the battle between the Peruvian Shining

The Hours (+)

Path terrorist group and former Peruvian President Alberto Fujimori. There is even a likeness in a character, albeit remote, to U.S. citizen Lori Berenson who was arrested and imprisoned in Peru for alleged terrorist collaboration. In this film, a young woman and native of the country supports the revolutionary leader Ezequiel/Duran (Abel Folk) with a fervor reminiscent of the Manson women.

Augustin Rejas (Javier Bardem) is a lawyer turned government investigator looking to arrest

Ezequiel, the leader of a terrorist organization. He is married to Sylvina (Alexandra Lencastre) and has an adolescent daughter who is taking ballet lessons from Yolanda (Laura Morante) with whom Augustin becomes emotionally involved. Good aspects of the film are travelogue scenes of rural living with the indigenous Indian population. Augustin is part Indian, and occasionally during the film, he speaks the indigenous language Quechua.

Regrettably, on balance, the time I spent watching this film was wasted. Don't let it happen to you. Avoid this flick.

Before Ed Koch was a film critic for Dan's Papers he was the mayor of New York.

SOUTHAMPTON COLLEGE PROUDLY PRESENTS THE DAN'S PAPERS THEY MADE THE MOVIE HERE FILM FESTIVAL

WILD MAN BLUES: THE WOODY ALLEN PROJECT

This Saturday, May 10 is the final presentation of this season's Dan's Papers "They Made The Movie Here" Film Festival at Southampton College. It's always sad to say au revoir to our friendly crowd of East End movie buffs, so to counteract the mournful event, we will rock Duke's Hall's Chancellor's Building with the toe-tickling music of Woody Allen and his Jazz Band interspersed with his neurotic complaining that is as riotous as the band. You will attend their concerts and travel with the Wood and family to the major European cities and examine his L.I. connections.

The Movies Made Here Film Festival will give Woody Allen fans a look behind his funny-looking face that contains both comedy and tragedy. And while we're peeking around the eyeglasses and heavy lids, perhaps we'll find out why he's such a fan of the East End as a place to film, in spite of his repeatedly saying that he hates leaving Manhattan. A weekend away? Pffuh! And, the sun? ugh! Those utterances, accompanied by the cock-eyed smile and simultaneous twist of agony, are captured in a documentary by Barbara Kopple, Wild Man Blues. In it, you will meet his parents who insist he should have been a druggist. They still wonder what he was doing in his room for such a long time. His wife, Soon Yi and his sister, Letty Aronson, are there to cuddle him, like the fragile, thin-shelled tough ol' egg he is. And, to give him what for.

What's He Doin' Miserable In Europe? You'll tour Europe with them. You know, those other places outside Manhattan and the Hamptons: Paris, Madrid, Geneva, Venice, Milano, Rome, London. All of them, a kvetch away from home. What takes him there? Why, his love of New Orleans Style Jazz. Europe understands its' value so, he's touring with a band doing one-night stands there. Talk about fans coming out! For Woody, it's frightening but, they want to hear him play clarinet with the group dedicated to Jazz's roots.

If you haven't been to Michael's Pub in Manhattan where Woody has appeared regularly with the Band led by Eddy Davis, you'll see and hear them, without a cover charge or minimum. The music is described by Woody and the musicians as crude (or pre-sophistication). It is a bit basic for my tastes but, it do get your toes tapping. My own palpitations go out for Woody's tastes because he talks a great deal of a Master of early Jazz, Sidney Bechet, who was my mentor and responsible for my working in Paris, way back then. Unlike Woody, I didn't play Concert Halls, only the caves. Putting music in the background, you'll find out what he and Soon Yi have for breakfast (besides his array of pills) You'll learn that he can't share a bathroom with anyone, not even, Soon Yi. What does he think of pets? A dog licking him? He'd rather be bitten by the dog. No love lost there. And what about his strange love affair with the Hamptons?

Yes, Woody owned a rather large house in Southampton. Is that the place talked about in his Hannah and Her Sisters? Someone in the audience will know, I'm sure. Let's talk and revisit some of the locations with segments from his movies. Is that lobster that got away in the kitchen (padding his part in Annie Hall) still lurking somewhere, now, mammoth in size. And, whose kitchen was that? Who owned that great house used in Interiors? The exterior wasn't chopped liver either. And, what about real estate values of "movie" houses? Remember those hysterical predictions of the Hamptons in Mighty Aphrodite? Why did the young girls love coming out here in Everyone Says I Love You?

We know.

Make sure your toes are in good shape, 'cause they'll be tapping up a storm. Your ribs are in fine shape, I'm sure. Woody's been tickling them for years. I am your good-natured host, Guy de Fraumeni, who, no doubt, will be rolling in the aisle with Sarah Halsey, along side good, natural refreshments. Harmonicas, ukuleles and drumsticks must be checked at the door.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

Oh, isn't every day Mothers Day? Yet on this greeting card holiday with gifts ranging from a personalized hand-made card to extravagant jewelry we honor mother. Will it be dinner out or a nice breakfast at home? I don't know about you but breakfast in bed just doesn't cut it for me. My husband loves to make pancakes, one of the very few cooked dishes he will attempt, and I will happily enjoy them on Mother's Day.

To make breakfast or brunch extra-special set the table with her favorite flowers. Keep everything smoothly organized. To accomplish this, plan your strategy for the preparation. If pancakes are in order prepare the batter ahead and have the utensils on hand that you will need, such as a wooden spoon to stir the batter, a ladle, a non-stick or seasoned iron skillet to cook the cakes, and a warm platter to transfer the pancakes to. To keep the pancakes warm turn the oven on low, about 180 degrees and place them in the oven as they are done. This brings back fond memories of my mom making pancakes for her large family of five kids and the increasing pileup of fluffy pancakes as she transferred them to her oven. Pitchers of warm maple syrup and a berry topping to adorn the cakes are a nice accompaniment.

A pot of hot coffee or tea and a savory coffee cake, especially if it's home made, (it can be done the day before) will bring your mom memories to cherish a lifetime.

VANILLA PANCAKES WITH FRESH BERRIES AND PURE MAPLE SYRUP

Set a pretty table with flowers and small bowls and pitchers of berries, cream and pure maple syrup for a festive Mother's Days Breakfast.

Serves 4-6

For the pancakes

2 cups all purpose flour*
2 tablespoons baking powder
3 tablespoons confectioner's sugar
7 large eggs, beaten
6 tablespoons melted butter plus extra for the griddle
1 cup milk
Seeds scraped from the pods 2 vanilla beans or 1 1/2 teaspoons pure vanilla extract

Fresh berries, whipped cream and pure maple syrup for serving

1. Measure the flour into a dry measuring cup. Combine the dry ingredients, flour, baking powder and sugar in a large bowl. In a smaller bowl, stir together the liquid ingredients, eggs, milk and melted butter. Stir (never beat) in the liquid ingredients to the dry all at once. If the batter seems to thick, stir in a little more milk, a little at a time, until the consistency is a little thicker than heavy cream. Gently fold in the vanilla beans to mix. Can be prepared ahead and held at room temperature for up to one hour.

2. Heat a seasoned pan or non-stick skillet and drizzle a little melted butter over the surface of the pan. Using a small, 1/4-cup ladle with a long handle, slowly pour the batter in one spot on the preheated surface for a 3-inch pancake. Adjust heat to medium-low and cook until the tops are covered with small bubbles and the bottoms are lightly browned. Carefully turn with a wide spatula and lightly brown the other side. Repeat with remaining batter. Keep warm as they are done in a 180-degree oven. Serve with a small bowl of fresh berries and sweetened whipped cream and a pitcher of warm maple syrup if desired.

SOUR-CREAM COFFEE CAKE

My mother had a little known box of recipe cards. Her caretaker handed it to me some years ago. While my mother pretty much cooked the foods of her heritage, she was always full of cooking surprises. I found this tasty recipe for sour-cream coffeecake among the cards.

Yield: 14-16 servings

1/4 pound (8 tablespoons) unsalted butter
3/4 cup sugar
2 eggs
2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1 cup sour cream
1 1/2 teaspoons vanilla

For the filling

1/2 cup chopped walnuts
1/2 cup granulated sugar
1/2 brown sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon

Thoroughly butter a 10-inch tube pan and dust with unseasoned breadcrumbs.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

1. In a mixing bowl cream butter and sugar together, about 2 minutes. Add eggs one at a time beating well after each addition.

2. Sift flour, baking powder and baking soda onto a large square of waxed paper. Add flour mixture to the bowl alternately with the sour cream and vanilla. In a small bowl mix walnuts, sugar and cinnamon.

3. Spread half the batter into the prepared pan and distribute half the nut mixture over it. Add remaining batter and top with remaining nut mixture. Bake for 60-70 minutes or until a cake tester comes out clean. Cool on a rack. Can be prepared up to one or two days ahead.

Now the best spot to get sushi for dinner is also the best spot to get sushi for lunch. Suki Zuki in Water Mill is now open seven days a week for lunch and dinner and they offer a creative menu for a quick bite or a relaxed midday meal. While the entire dinner menu is available, the lunch specials offer a selection of items that will make the afternoon float by.

Simple starters include the Suki Zuki Salad, Edamame, Sesame Wakame, Hijiki and, always a favorite, the Teriyaki Chicken Salad. For those looking for a light bite or just a snack, any of these options will surely satisfy.

The selection of entrées provides for both the sushi lover and those who prefer dishes that have been through the fire. The Yakisoba (stir-fried noodles and vegetables with shrimp and chicken) makes for a lovely lunch and the Shogayaki (thinly sliced pork with ginger barbecue sauce) is another tantalizing option. The Teriyaki with the choice of salmon or the whitefish of the day sautéed with teriyaki sauce is wonderful and light and there is, of course, the sushi.

Suki Zuki offers a California roll with Tuna, Salmon, Yellowtail and White fish of the Day – hope that it's local Halibut which chef and co-owner Toyo says is the best in the world. Rounding out the options, there is also Sashimi with Tuna, Salmon and White fish of the Day. Each entrée comes with Miso soup.

If a drink or two is in order, Suki Zuki is now offering a number of specialty drinks that are matched in their creativity only by their sublime taste. The Hawaiian Saketini, Cosmoblanca, Pink Palace, Ginger Peach Saketini and Liquid Sword are best bets for a little midday, liquid relaxation — and if that doesn't fit the bill, they're definitely worth stopping in to try once the workday is done. If the mixed drinks aren't your style, they also offer a wide selection of sakes and an admirable wine list.

With a fantastic menu, a comfortable, intimate atmosphere and a delightful staff to serve you, Suki Zuki is definitely a great spot to have lunch, dinner, a quick bite in between or a drink when the day is done.

Lunch menu prices are reasonable, with starters from $4-$6 and entrées from $8-$16. Lunch is served from 12 to 5:30 and dinner is 6 to 10, and the bar is open until midnight.

What's New In Town: Inn At Quogue

If you were fortunate enough to be on the guest list of the grand opening and VIP party at The Restaurant at the Inn (at Quogue), indeed the experience would stay in your memory banks for a very long time. Over 200 guests from Quogue and nearby communities as well as regional media celebrated the event with host Larry Hoffman, East End restaurateur, who recently purchased and renovated the landmark eatery. The event featured Executive Chef Matthew Guiffrida and some of his exciting new culinary works of art including jerk lobster and scallop risotto, fried oyster lasagna, surf and turf seiche, "Lime in the Coconut", Chilean seabass, apple maple roasted Cornish hen, herb crusted New York strip steak and slow roasted roma tomatoes with boursin cheese. Executive Chef Matthew Guiffrida, the bright new culinary "Star" at the restaurant will also preside over the restaurant's celebrated wine dinners, creating menus to compliment winemaker's selections. A "Vision of Fusion", Guiffrida's signature style of haute cuisine, is a unique melange of American fare with a New World influence, meriting rave reviews and a five-point elevation in restaurant's Zagat rating of 26, one of the highest on Long Island.

Matthew, a certified Executive Chef, has an impressive track record at some of the eastern seaboard's finest resorts that include the Junction Restaurant at the Snowshoe Resort in West Virginia, Turtle Bay Restaurant at the Caneel Bay Resort in the US Virgin Islands, the Elephant Walk Restaurant at the Sandestin Beach Resort in Florida to name a few. Matthew was also the former host of Home and Garden Television's On The Menu and has assisted Master Chef Dieter Kiessling for special events. Mathew is a rising star in the Hamptons culinary circuit.

The grand opening event was to let the community and media know that the renovations were completed, including moving the bar back to its original location. The Inn is a terrific place to celebrate weddings, engagement parties, conferences, or any special occasion for thirty to three hundred guests. The Hamptons eatery will also offer a full banquet repertoire to meet the needs of every special occasion. For more intimate gatherings, there is a special sun-filled clubroom with large sofas and a separate and private bar for more intimate gatherings.

The service is notably outstanding and attention to details is a tradition at The Restaurant at the Inn at Quogue. The historic eatery features a restored old-world bar complete with leather couches, a cozy fireplace and great music.

The Restaurant at the Inn at Quogue is truly a dining experience for 2003, is neatly nestled in a quaint corner of the Hamptons and is currently open Thursday through Sunday for dinner, Sunday for brunch, as well as catering and special events, seven days a week. After Memorial Day, the restaurant is open Mondays and Thursdays through Sunday for dinner, Sunday brunch and seven days a week for catering and special events. The Restaurant at the Inn at Quogue is located at 47 Quogue Street, Quogue. Call for information and reservations at 631-653-6800.

Sneezing And Wheezing The Season Away

Allergy season is upon us. Once the trees and flowers begin to bloom, the pollen starts to fly, drifting into irritable nasal passages and wreaking havoc. While this year brings no fabulous new instant cure for allergies, there are always advancements in treatment and medications that may help sufferers.

Allergy and cold symptoms are similar (coughing, congestion, headache, watery eyes, and sneezing), but doctors say that the typical cold goes away in three to seven days, while allergy symptoms will persist. Even if you've never had allergies before, it's possible to develop them later in life, especially if you've moved to a new climate or are suddenly intensely exposed to new allergens. Because allergies can be complicated and must be taken into account in light of a patient's medical history, it's very important to consult with a physician in order to diagnose and treat your symptoms. To find an allergist in your area, contact your health insurance company or search on sites like the American Academy of Allergy, Asthma, and Immunology (www.aaaai.org). This site is also a great resource for news on allergy treatment. They even keep daily pollen counts in various locations across the United States in order to help people forecast their allergic reactions. You can sign up to have these pollen alerts emailed to you.

Once you have a doctor, there are some common-sense steps you can take to help reduce your allergies. First, since pollen counts are highest between 5 and 10 am, try to stay indoors between those hours. And if you spend a lot of time outside in your yard, keep in mind that weeds like nettle and ragweed and trees such as birch, cedar, oak, and cottonwood, are irritants. Eliminate weeds as much as possible from the yard, and if you plant new trees around the house, opt for less irritating types. If you mow the lawn in the summertime, wear a mask to reduce the amount of pollen you inhale, and once you're done, shower and wash your clothes to remove collected pollen. Wash sheets weekly in hot water, and shower before bed to rid hair of pollen. Also, if you have area rugs, be sure to wash them periodically to eliminate dust, mold, and pollen build-up. Air treatments in the house can help keep the air free of dust and pollen, and air-conditioning will help keep out summer irritants. Be sure to change the filters in vents and air conditioning units more frequently in the spring and summertime. Mold, common in humid climates like ours, can be minimized with a dehumidifier and by cleaning moldy areas with a bleach solution.

HEALTH & BEAUTY

Preventive measures help, but for allergy treatment, medication is often the solution. With a wide variety of over-the-counter and prescription drugs, a doctor will help you find the right treatment. Now that some allergy drugs have been approved for over-the-counter purchase, doctors fear that people will self-medicate, which is not only very dangerous but also not as effective as a doctor-prescribed treatment plan. A physician may prescribe antihistamines (to relieve allergic rhinitis, or hayfever), decongestants (to decrease nasal congestion), cortico-steroids (to reduce inflammation), bronchodilators (to open air passages, mainly for people with asthma), mast cell stabilizers (to decrease inflammation of bronchial tubes) or leukotriene modifiers (to block allergic reactions or for persistent asthma). Allergy shots, which slowly build up a resistance to allergens, are another option for serious long-term allergic reactions. But for hayfever, which comes and goes in Spring and Summer, antihistamines and decongestants are the most commonly prescribed drugs. Consulting with a doctor will help you to decide which treatment, or combination of treatments, is best for you. And when you're not frolicking in the fresh Spring air, keeping your house clean, the windows closed, and acting wisely will help you to avoid at least some of Spring's allergens.

George Of The Jungle Gym

The jungle gym is a component in every child's development. This is where they learn to climb, strengthen their muscles, use their determination to get all the way across the monkey bars in one go, gather up the courage to slide down the fireman's pole, and learn to share and take turns on the swings. These days, the average backyard swing set has evolved into a well-designed, adaptable piece of equipment to keep the kids happily occupied for years. The simplicity of a swing set with a few swings is seemingly a thing of the past. Now, it's all about the gazebo tent, the climbing wall, the pirate lookout, the construction of the loop-di-loop slide. People want the best of the best, and after doing some research, even I wished I had a reason to buy one of these deluxe, uber-swing sets.

There are many, many options out there for swingset-seekers. Choices range from the traditional designs to souped-up-got-it-all models. Eastern Jungle Gym, with a location in Nyack, has a selection of creative designs that can be adapted to your liking. For example, the "Dream and Fantasy Series," has seven-foot-high monkey bars, an eight-foot wave slide, and a four foot seven inch tent on top. With several swings to boot, the gym looks fun. But for even more fun, you can get the "Hi-5 Fantasy Series," which boasts eight foot high swing beams and monkey bars, a ten-foot wave slide, and a five-foot-nine-inch high tent on top. Gyms can be customized as well, so you can go to town with your own designs. You can check out Eastern Jungle Gym online at www.easternjunglegym.com.

FAO Schwartz sells a "Mini-Mansion," which sells

The structure is made for the outdoors, and while it seems ludicrous to spend $7,000 on a tree that's been built for the outdoors, I guess the appeal is the novelty of a hollowed-out trunk and the status-symbol attraction of the FAO Schwartz tree.

Perhaps most enticing are the swing sets and jungle gyms built by Cedar Works. Based in Rockport, Maine, the company offers 100% chemical-free high-end swing sets which can be customized with your own specifications. Because they use only Northern White Cedar wood, which is supposedly splinter free and can be used completely untreated, they claim that the swing set will never need maintenance or chemicals. That may be a relief for parents concerned about chromium copper arsenate, which the CPSC has cited as a chemical that increases the risk of lung or bladder cancer in children who play on equipment treated with agents that contain CCA. The subject is controversial and opinion varies on the risks of CCA, so do some research yourself before making any final judgements.

for $775 and includes a sliding board and a two-story house into which kids can climb. They also offer the "Ultimate Tree-House," which is constructed out of a real, hollowed-out tree and recycled barn wood. Both kids and adults can enter through a door in the trunk of the tree and climb up to the top, to the tree house.

Beyond the appeal of natural wood is the fact that Cedar Works has some very cool jungle gyms, and with the new jungle-gym-workout picking up in popularity, adults will be happy to learn that the swing sets are strong enough for them as well. Models range from the Climber Gym, which is

Antiquing Your Way East To West (And Back Again)

Shopping for antiques in the Hamptons can become more than a hobby; with all the antique shops around, it can be a full-time affair. With the upcoming Antiques Show at the Bridgehampton Community House, it seemed a timely moment to discuss antique hunting in Bridgehampton and beyond.

When looking for antiques, your best bet is to find a reputable dealer. Out here, that's not hard since most antique stores have established reputations. Dealers should know the provenance, which is basically the history, of a piece of furniture. They can tell the age of a piece based on the type of wood, style of the joints and drawers, and other factors, and whether or not it has its original finish or has been refinished, all things that affect its value.

With so many shops out here, it's hard to figure out where to begin. Mark Olives of The American Wing in Bridgehampton said that it's less a matter of who's better than whom in the Hamptons but that, "Each store has its own specialty." The American Wing's specialty is vintage rattan and wicker furniture (which has been restored) from the 1890's to the 1940's, as well as lighting, chandeliers, and lamps. Olives has owned The American Wing for the past ten years and said that he deals with architects and interior designers, as well as individual shoppers. He recommends the booklet written by Joan Carlson of Sag Harbor, entitled A Tour of the Antique Shops of Long Island. The booklet includes maps and descriptions of each store and can be found at the American Wing and around town.

If you're ready to start shopping, Bridgehampton is a good first step. Start at one end of the main street and work your way down and back again, and you'll find over ten shops. Park along Route 27, starting at the Ocean Road (or Starbuck's) end of town. Along the North side of the street, you can stop in at the following:

Barbara Trujillo
Amy Perlin
Hampton Briggs Antiques
Chez Soi
Gemini Antiques
The English Garden Shop
Devonshire (which sells reproductions of antiques)
English Country Antiques is a bit further down, just behind the Gulf station on Snake Hollow Road
Turn around and work your way back, this time along the south side of the street at these shops:
The Mill at Bridgehampton
John Salibello
Beach Plum Antiques
The American Wing
Schorr and Dobinsky Antiques
Denton and Gardner

And don't forget that the Antique Show will be held on May 10, from 10 to 5, at the Bridgehampton Community House. That's just in time for Mother's Day, so if you're still gift-hunting, you may want to take Mom on a shopping spree.

nine feet wide and nine feet deep, with 28 square feet of climbing space, to the Sandbox Climber Slant, which has a five-foot climbing wall, 76 feet of platform playspace, a seven foot funnel tunnel slide, a bambino slide, a gazebo tent on top, a crow's nest lookout, tires swings, wooden swings, and regular plastic swings. Even more impressive is the CedarSaurus Expialidocious, which has 200 square feet of platform space, 23 ways to climb, and is 47 feet wide and 27 feet deep. It's a mansion for kids, and you'll have to have a huge yard to accommodate this monster gym. It has a gazebo tower, two steering wheels, a cedar fone, a funnel tunnel, a super chute (7' slide) and a bambino slide for toddlers. There is a gazebo tower and two tent towers, a connecting bridge, a rope ladder, chin bar, firefighter's pole, and best of all, a hammock at ground level. All sets can be adapted for toddlers; they'll build in stairs instead of a ramp, and then as the kids get older, you can remove and add structures.

The company does not sell packaged sets but uses these models as examples; customers select and pay for only the modifications they want. Speaking of payments, the website doesn't list prices, but they do offer a payment plan. You can be sure that swing sets like this come at a price. To contact the company, log onto www.cedarworks.com. Or call 1- (800) GO-CEDAR. They deliver all over the US and abroad and have an independent contractor on Long Island who will install the set for you.

When buying and installing a set, keep in mind that you need six feet of clearance on all sides, and that it's best to have it professionally installed. Make sure the company uses recessed bolts, strong wooden dowels on the ladders, molded safety handles, and uprights at each corner of the platforms. Buy from companies with a safety warranty and supervise kids as they play. Or better yet, jump in and climb along with them.

Good Reading Makes Good Gardening

Beautiful books, those coffee-table toppers, are a nice touch in any home. Guests enjoy sitting down to flip through a large, glossy-paged book on virtually anything. This year, several new decorating books caught my eye as worthwhile additions to a Hamptons house. With beautiful photographs and well-written texts, these books are both decorative and functional, serving as inspirational and instructional guides.

Writer Leslie Geddes-Brown and photographer Jan Baldwin collaborated on a book called Waterside Living: Inspirational Homes By Lakes, Rivers, and the Ocean. The cover photo is a colorful shot of a person in an outdoor shower, one of the many joys of water life depicted in this wonderful collection of homes. Appropo for the Long Island dweller, the book is broken down into sections based on type of water: "Lake Living," "River Living," and of course, "Ocean Living." Some photos, like the cover shot, are more playful, while others are tranquil portraits of homes at sunset; all are gorgeous and make you want to live in the homes featured, or, better yet, inspire you to look around your own with a new sense of appreciation.

Another water-inspired book, Poolscaping:

Gardening and Landscaping Around Your Swimming Pool and Spa, by gardener and landscape designer Catriona Tudor Erler, will help you develop a beautiful pool space. While you may have a landscaper in charge of such things and may not plan on ever setting hand on a shovel, you can never have too many ideas. This book offers suggestions on pool and spa placement as well as fence design (and how to disguise a fence with landscaping), and plantings that work well around a pool. Erler offers a wealth of ideas on gardening to complement the pool area, how to build or rebuild a deck or patio around the pool, and how to best light the pool and its surroundings. The book is helpful if you're starting from scratch, or if you're refurbishing an existing pool.

Once the tranquil surroundings of the pool and garden have been established, it's time for a garden party. Suzy Bales' Garden Parties is a wonderful book filled with beautiful pictures of gardens as well as recipes and tips for throwing fabulous outdoor parties this summer. She offers advice on everything from formal garden teas and dinners to laid-back breakfast in a mountain garden, with suggestions on food and garden preparations, like how to make a swag. She suggests party themes like a "mad hatters tea party," where every-

A Good Garden Start: Buying Healthy Plants

Although most reputable garden centers try very hard to supply healthy plants in top condition for planting in the spring, free of diseases and infestations, it is still very possible to purchase unnoticed. It is much more cost effective and wise to know what to look for rather than purchase and have to return later on. Of course, your supplier would no doubt refund your money (save your receipts) without a hassle, but if you have grouped your plants together perhaps you have already infected your otherwise healthy plants.

Check to see if there are any wilted leaves on your new plant, along with any sun scorched ones. If the retailer doesn't supply shade for the more vulnerable and shade loving plants from day one, you are going to be in for some problems down the road. It will be very possible that your plants are heading for a weakened state when you buy them. This will make them susceptible to disease and insect infestation and have not much strength to fight this off on their own.

Unless you buy the plants very early in the season before they've gone through many wilting cycles, it's best not to purchase plants from a source where they have not gotten proper care, because you will just not know what you are getting.

How about buying through catalogs? It's always helpful to be able to see the plant you are buying in advance. But if you are unable to find the particular kinds you want, you can be reassured that there are many very reliable mail-order sources of high-quality perennials and annuals. Frequently these growers are the only source of the newest and less well-known varieties. Identifying which companies to order from and which are going to be able to be relied upon to provide top quality plants can be difficult. Probably the best way I know of is to speak to other gardeners who have learned which companies to deal with, which company has consistently given good service and quality plants, and which have not. Read the fine print on the guarantee the company offers, reputable firms will stand behind their products from delivery to growing time. I have returned plants years later to certain mail order companies for plants that have just not 'taken off' with no problem whatsoever. If you see a catalog that gives rave reviews to every plant they have listed, I would tend to be suspicious. Also if they claim their plants are lowest among other mail order houses, heads up. Chances are you are going to receive a very small plant or a close-to-weed variety. In the plant world, you get what you pay for!

Everybody Into The Pool

It is never too early to open your pool. Most people like to have their pool ready by Memorial Day weekend, but depending on the condition of your pool, getting it ready can take anywhere from two days to two weeks. The following are things to consider when you or your pool service opens the pool for the sunny days ahead:

1. Remove pool cover. There are several types of covers you can use from solid, to soft to mesh, depending on your preference. If you used a solid cover, water may have gotten into the cover to clog it down down, in which case you will need a pump that will help get the water out so you can pull it off.

2. Start the filter system.

3. Treat water with chemicals. The pool always needs a lot more chemicals in the beginning to make it swimmable. How much you use varies on the condition of the pool. What chemicals you need depends on the pH level of the pool when it is ready to open. The object is to balance it out until the water is at a basic pH level.

4. Vacuum and clean. If you used a soft cover, leaves and roughage from the fall and winter tend to get stuck in pockets of the cover and fall into the pool when taking it off, so cleaning and vacuuming may take a little longer than if you used a mesh or hard cover.

It is always better to open your pool before it gets to warm; otherwise the chemicals can potentially go bad. But after you open your pool, you have to maintain it.

The most important aspect of maintaining a pool is how to keep the chemicals balanced, because the chemicals are the most vital part of your pool. They keep it safe for swimming and too much chemicals can be dangerous. So how do you know if the chemicals are properly balanced? First, look at the color of the water. If the color is off, there is a good chance it has to do with a chemical imbalance. Unfortunately, this is not absolute, so get yourself a test kit to monitor the chlorine and pH levels of your pool. These levels should be monitored at least once a week. A test kit usually runs about $20.

It is also extremely important to keep an eye on the water level. Water level can effect how the equipment works and how well they are maintained. It can also effect the balance of the chemicals in the pool, so, throughout the summer, it is vital to watch the water level closely.

The last thing you have to look at is the filter equipment to make sure it is working properly. Again, the best way to judge this is by looking at the water. If it is mucky and blurry, or if there are a lot of things floating around, the filter system may not be working properly.

At the end of the season the pool should not be drained unless a repair is needed, so you should not have to fill up your pool when it is time to get it ready for the summer. Because, Long Island does not depend on reservoir water, a water shortage like today will not impact the work of pool installation companies or how pool owners operate.

If you are planning to install a pool for the summer, the average vinyl pool runs anywhere from about $25,000 to $35,000, including equipment, retaining wall, and patio furnishings. A gunite pool (made of steel and concrete applied through a compressor) will run you about double as much. It is also necessary to get a permit before installing a pool. Most pool installation companies will take care of the paperwork for you, but it is a good idea to make sure of this before you sign a contract.

I know it sounds ridiculous to even entertain the thought of fall foliage now, but you simply must if you want to bring in some flowers for fall displays or for embellishment on holiday tables and gifts. Watch as you go along the road. The Asters, Feverfew, Ironweeds and Goldenrods. The Queen Anne's lace and Yarrow are also found growing profusely along roadside, so you may want to keep your eyes on them as well. When you go on road trips this summer, keep your eyes open for different varieties that you think may do well in a display, something you may not find in your immediate area. But for more of a variety, it's worth growing some of the garden annuals.

You can sow seeds directly into the garden during the next few weeks. Easiest to grow are the everlastings – celosia, chenille plant, cornflower, globe amaranth, statice, strawflower, acroclinum and honesty are good choices.

With a little extra care you can also try drying some of the most common garden flowers. Asters, candytuft, marigold, poppies and zinnias are great choices. The ornamental grasses are perfect for drying as well. You can try picking them early and letting them dry upside down in an attic or you can wait till later in the fall, when they have dried in the garden. Foxtail grass, fountain grass and pampas are some of the best for drying.

Drying always seemed like something I couldn't tackle, but upon trying some last year, it proved me wrong. Now when I see anything I like, I just cut it, tie a ribbon or some sort of tie to it and hang it upside wherever I can. If you use a ribbon, it really can look quite pretty. I have hung from my dining room light, from the ends of the top of my curtain treatments, even from a stairway. It really doesn't seem to matter where it's hung, just as long as it gets enough air circulation, that it's not laying against anything that would hold in the moisture and prevent drying.

The only thing that I find important is that if you are hanging in bunches, before you string them upside down, arrange them in the way you are going to want to use them. Because when they are dried and crispy, if it wasn't gathered together right, you are going to lose your blooms when you try to separate them. Try to keep the clusters or gatherings on the small side, this way when you group them together, they mesh. They then can be arranged with several different varieties going up and down the stems for displays.

Keep those hands dirty!

One Man's Trash, Another Man's Treasure

If your decorating tastes tend more toward Alice in Wonderland than Ethan Allen, you need not be short of options on the East End. A junker is a dedicated purveyor or collector of junk.

When we talk about junk, we do not mean antiques, collectibles, fine used goods, (although any or all of these can and do qualify) or any other euphemism for stuff that used to belong to someone else. We're talking broken bicycles, rusty signs, torn yellowed posters, cracked ceramic, crumbling wrought iron and clocks without hands. Items that generally give new meaning to the term "scratch and dent."

The junker's passion is for potential. They are out to find something that will clean up well—be it a diamond in the rough, or just a conversation piece in the living room. The signs of wear and tear are the junker's badge of honor.

Under the name Richard Mutt, Marcel Duchamp created a sensational scandal in the 1920's art world by painstakingly recreating a men's room urinal in ceramic and hanging it on a gallery wall. The artistic value of this and some of Duchamp's other work has been fervently debated ever since. In later years, some art historians have even questioned whether or not Duchamp actually made the urinal himself and have debated at length whether or not this even matters. Duchamp himself said that he, "took an ordinary article of life, placed it so that it's usual significance disappeared under a new title and point of view...[creating] a new thought for that object."

Decorators who use junk in their work have incorporated a certain Duchampian aesthetic. But, the mistake of taking this too far and trespassing into outright mimicry should be avoided as it can sometimes lead to disastrous results. One such clever soul actually hung an old urinal (thoroughly cleaned and sanitized no doubt) on a hallway wall in their house. During a party at the house a reveler accidentally mistook the decoration for the real thing. The hosts were horrified when the puzzled guest asked why their old toilet didn't flush.

Significant to junkers though, is the notion that Duchamp's artwork was not created, but rather found. Found items, used in an interesting and inventive way can make for unique accents to any décor. Sometimes a find can be used just as it is, after a little TLC. By TLC, we are talking about a bit of cleaning of prepping, not out and out refinishing. A true junker seldom refinishes a find. Think of it as shining and buffing the face on your grandfather's old pocket watch, instead of replacing the glass even though it is cracked. The crack is part of the character and interest.

Besides using your find as is, there are a couple of creative ways that junk can be reused: re-purposing or creative modification. A re-purposed object is one that has been changed very little or not all from its original form, but is being used for a new purpose. For example, you find a cast iron fire alarm box circa 1950, the base of which, when completely hollowed out, happens to be the right size to accommodate a stack of compact discs. Voila, eureka, presto and shazam—instant CD tower. Of course this is not the sort of thing you go looking for. There is more than a little fortuity involved in this pursuit, but it's rewarding when it works out. Creative modification is a little different and requires more work on the part of the junker. An example of this might be if you find an old surfboard that is no longer seaworthy, but could make an excellent bar-top, or tabletop once some legs are attached. Another example could be you find a rusted out train lantern with glass intact, and with some simple electrical wiring you could turn the lantern into a bedside lamp. The point here is that you are creating something new from something old.

Junking is almost always fun and sometimes a thrill. There are plenty of places to go on the East End. There are estate sales taking place most every Saturday and Sunday morning if you have a mind to find them. There are also permanent, if a bit less adventurous (since the work has been done for you) locations such as Yesterday's Treasures (where you can also pick up a cow from NYC's Cow Parade) on North Highway in Southampton, or The Yard Couple (which boasts the Junk Yard Dogs label) in Sag Harbor. Now go on – feed your junk habit like you were William S. Bourroughs.

—John Capone

Police Blotter

With only a handful of days left 'til the big week-end the Hamptons are heating up - and I mean this literally. The East Hampton Fire Chief thought he was receiving a call about e-mail when police requested his presence at a Rivers Road residence in regards to some hot mail. When he arrived, he found a smoldering mailbox and a concerned neighbor. The neighbor had called police to report the incident but no one saw it actually happen. Police haven't been able to contact the resident of the home.

A Montauk resident was burned last week by an unknown person(s). The Deforest Road (no, seriously that's the name of the road) man called police when he discovered that someone had removed a rail and a few steps from the deck in his back yard that lead to the beach. He and police assume it was someone having a beach fire nearby. The deck will cost $500 dollars to repair. Police officers have been asked to patrol the area more often in the future.

And the temperature continues to rise in East Hampton... the fire chief was called again on Wednesday, this time to a Three Mile Harbor Road residence. Police say, a mirror on the wall reflected sunlight and ignited part of another wall. The damage was "minimal" according to the chief.

A Montauk man will be cooling down in his lawyer's office this week after an early-season party was cut short by police. Apparently, the man hosting the party allowed several under-aged people to consume alcohol. Police charged him with endangering the welfare of a child.

It looks as though MacGuiver, the popular '80's/'90's daytime TV woodsman/crime fighter, has given up his acting career to take on petty crimes in the Hamptons. This time he's not preventing them, he's committing them. A Seaview Avenue woman called police to report the theft of several items from her unlocked car last Monday. Among the $20 worth of items were a rescue hammer (the type designed to break windows and cut seat belts), a Swiss Army Knife and a small compass.

A midnight landscaper struck several landscaped "islands" in the Old Orchard Lane area of East Hampton on Tuesday. The president of the Old Orchard Lane Property Association called police to report the $200 dollars worth of bushes that had been mowed down by an unknown driver. The families of the bushes were notified but weren't available for interviews as of press time.

Dan's Letters

LONG BEACH. BEACH LONG

Dear Dan,

I had a laugh regarding "Unsigned's" letter and his comparison about the BMW and the Porsche. I couldn't care less about the cars; I rely on the Jetney and NYCTA to get around. What I laughed at was the writer's allegory that comparing the cars was like comparing Sag Harbor's Long Beach to Queen's' Long Beach. The "other" Long Beach is in Nassau, not Queens County - big, big difference!

THERE'S SOMETHING IN HIS NOTHING

Dear Dan,

Regarding Away at School - "My Little Coffee Shop." I have to tell you how much I have been enjoying your son, David Lion Rattiner's column, "Away at School" that has been published in your paper. The last one I read in the April 4, 2003 edition, "My Little Coffee Shop" was particularly good. As with many of his columns, his topics seem very "Seinfeldesque" (is there such a word?). David writes about "nothing at all," but with a clever, observation about what he is seeing that others overlook. It is fascinating how this young college student can take a mundane topic and see it from another viewpoint. His insight into the life of his local coffee shop in the morning and then in the evening, comparing the patrons is mature beyond his years. While other customers idly sip their latte's, David is noticing and partaking the world around him. Who ever had the idea for him to write this column during his time away at school should be complimented. (Did he ask Dad for this opportunity, or did you notice his writing skills while he was in high school?)

Surely, there is a book somewhere inside of young David that will come out one of these days/years ahead. With the great name you gave him, strong, masculine and unique "David Lion Rattiner" it will look terrific on the cover of a book jacket! Put me down for an autographed copy when he is in the bookstore out in the Hamptons! I'm sure he will find SOMETHING unique to write about!

FRENCH LESSONS

Dear Dan,

As a restaurateur specializing in French Cuisine, we feel it is necessary to comment on the recent boycott of French cuisine.

In an effort to show patriotism we feel that the boycotts are unjustified. Our restaurant purchases from American suppliers, employs American workers, and pay taxes to the American government similar to any restaurant. By boycotting our restaurants, people are only harming Americans. The French government is not being affected in anyway. America and its economy feel the affect.

The making of our great nation is built around people of all nationalities and as American citizens we should all be proud of our heritage. The fact that we serve French cuisine should be no greater difference than a dry cleaner that advertises, operates a "French Cleaner," or a clothing maker of offers "French design" styles.

As Americans we have the right to demonstrate and boycott, however, a responsibility goes along with these rights to understand whom is actually being affected by the boycott. During this difficult time, we as Americans should stand together and support one another.

SING ME A SONG, YOU'RE THE PIANO MAN

Dear Dan,

The great pianist Artur Schnabel once said, "Only a few know and like me." Then he added, "Fortunately, the few are numerous!"

Pondering that remark not long ago, I suddenly thought: "That's like our concerts on Shelter Island!" We're a small time operation with a small audience (the Presbyterian Church can seat only about 200 people), but you "few" who come to our concerts are so responsive and enthusiastic, you indeed seem like the most "numerous" audience one could ever find.

These days I think we all may be especially appreciative - and in need of - music. Amidst the steady drumbeat of world news, music becomes a salvation. It lifts us out of ourselves, out of the day-to-day, and reminds us of the creative wonders of the human spirit.

When the Mendelssohn String Quartet played here in February, the audience erupted not only in praise of their stunning performance, but in gratitude for transporting us into realms of intense beauty. And in April, when the brilliant French pianist, Jean-Efflam Bavouzet, played sonatas by Italian, German, and Russian composers, we were powerfully reminded that great music soars beyond borders and politics.

More such wonderful music lies ahead: An exciting trio with clarinet in June, a dazzling Israeli pianist in September, an outstanding string quartet from Maine in October. And some special stars are looming on the horizon for 2004!

You wonderful "few" are the ones who make these transforming experiences possible. We hope you will continue to be responsive with your contributions so that we can maintain our programs to enrich your lives with the beauty of music.

"Lands End"

Sands Point $29,500,000

Today, Lands End stands as a testament to a remarkable era, a residential masterwork of classic character. Set on the northern tip of Sands Point with over 1,500 feet of waterfront, two private beaches, thirteen plus acres, beautifully landscaped lawns, seven room guest cottage, seven car garage, stables, green houses, tennis court, pool and a dazzling four season entertainment center. The mansion, pristinely maintained, is one of the most captivating ever constructed. A fine example of the Long Island Country house genre remaining on the Gold Coast today.
